From the workbook Introduction:

Join me, brothers, not in another men's event or movement, but in the pursuit of our healing, honesty and the joy of being the men that God intended for us to be. Come forth and be real, not with everyone but with a few good men. This is our rebellion against the status quo, against our false selves, against the male caricatures that others have drawn for us. We will step out of the herd and create a new way for men. We will forge friendships with one another that stand the tests of conflicts and time. Our friendships will make us better husbands, better fathers, and better men. We will journey towards a better identity. We accept the challenge that this journey will be daunting. But we will commit to changing the world of men, one man at a time.
