

San Francisco's 19 Hottest New Happy Hours

Updated by Allie Pape on Mar 12, 2015, 10:59a

In a city that seems to get more expensive by the minute, happy hour offers a measure of sweet relief, allowing drinkers to unwind with an affordable beverage and maybe a discounted snack or two. We've dug into the Eater archives to mine the 19 most recent additions to SF's happy hour scene, from $3 beers at a boozy arcade to wine by the ounce at a classy French bistro. Along the way, there are plenty of dirt-cheap oysters, delectable cocktails, and affordable bottles of wine—and even a few late-night happy hours, for you night owls. See you at the bar.

4 Brewcade

Save a few extra quarters for the arcade machines by hitting happy hour at Brewcade (3-7 pm daily), when every draft beverage, including wine, cocktails, and something called the "Grape Drank Slushie," is $1 off. Cans of Anchor California Lager also go for $3 in that timeslot.
