

Saving up to 70% on oil spend – free trial for Fishing News’ readers

MarShip UK is looking for candidates to test its oil purification system over three months and the company’s managing director Peter Weide said that its EDI oil purifier allows oil changes to be carried out at longer intervals, reducing costs.

“Fishing vessels typically carry out oil drains at 500 hours and replace as per the manufacturers recommendations or when the oil has become contaminated with combustion products or fuel,” he said.

Mr Weide explained that reducing the cycle of draining and disposal is easy to do with the EDI oil purifier, which reduces the cycle to twice yearly oil drains so over a year the same engine would use only 800 litres of oil.

“When tested on a Caterpillar 3508 with nine service intervals per year the total cost of oil changes equated to just over £6,000. When two EDI units were installed they reduced the service intervals to 2.3, spending just £1,800 on the total costs,” he said.

The EDI Lub Oil Purifier is manufactured in the UK and uses a clear two-stage process. The first stage is a traditional 1 micron absolute filter.

In the second stage, the oil flows over a patented heated plate in an extremely thin film in which water and gaseous acids from combustion and fuel dilution are evaporated. The additional removal of these liquid and gaseous contaminants means oil life can be considerably increased over the traditional methods which only remove the suspended contaminants.

UK are offering a trial of the system which will last approximately three months. The trial will include full engineering support and oil analyses to ensure your engine is never at risk.

To qualify, you must operate a vessel located in the UK and demonstrate a commitment to the system.

MarShip UK will work with you to set oil drain target, they will provide and install the units and provide free oil-analyses throughout the trial. At the end of the trial you will need to provide feedback and a testimonial of your experience for publication. You then have the option to keep the units on board at a pre-agreed price or return them.

To take advantage of this free trial please contact Roxzanne Fox-Roberts or Mandy Stone at sales@marship.eu or 0845 287 1546 quoting that you are responding to the article in Fishing News.

Guiding Star on Parkol floating dock last week while fitting out and machinery installation of another two new boats of similar size continues at the yard

Busy times at Parkol

The remarkable degree with which Whitby boatbuilders Parkol Marine Engineering have developed in the last ten years was highlighted last week when work was being carried out simultaneously on four separate 26m vessels, reports David Linkie.

Approaching the first anniversary of her launch at Whitby, the 26m pair seiner Guiding Star following her 18-month old sistership Our Lass III onto Parkol’s dry-dock for routine maintenance work and hull repainting.

Less than 10m away from Guiding Star, fitting out and machinery installation work on two contrasting types of new builds scheduled to be lifted into the River Esk in the early summer, continued to progress well under cover.

The vessels currently under construction are a 26m whitefish trawler for Yell skipper Michael Henderson, together with partners Mark Hoseason and Lindsay Inkster of the Guardian Angell Fishing Company Ltd., and a 27m motor yacht built in the style of the iconic 1950’s American coastal naval tugs for Whitby Yachts LLP.

Fabrication is also scheduled to commence in the coming weeks of a 14.95m vivier crabber for Brown and Bright Shellfish Ltd of Brixham.

Guiding Star was scheduled to come off the dry-dock at the beginning of this week and was to be replaced with the 22.6m Newlyn netter Governik of Ladram PZ 5, which steamed to North Yorkshire from Cornwall last weekend.
