

AMANDA WARREN

Three Locks Road (Deadman Crossing)

Although the fruit grows heavy and bright,
we do not eat with the dead.

We do not eat of the dead:
their jewel brightness, ripe for the taking.

We leave the fruit of the dead:
it rots on the grave where it lands;
we remember what feeds it.