CHAMPAGNE

English Sparkling
Wine
Prosecco

What would yachting be without Champagne?

This famous sparkling wine comes from the Champagne region in northern France. Champagne can be made from three different grape varieties: Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier. The term “Blanc de Blancs” means the wine is made from only Chardonnay grapes and “Blanc de Noirs” only from the red grape varieties, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier.

Since the weather in Champagne can vary year on year, most Champagne is a blend of different vintages and villages to create a consistent house style known as “Non-Vintage”. When there have been exceptional growing conditions for the grapes, producers will make a “Vintage Champagne” that contains only grapes harvested from that year. Vintage Champagnes are better quality, aged for longer than Non-Vintage Champagne and have a lot more complexity. The word “Brut” on the label simply means “dry” and is the mostly popular style of Champagne.

HOW CHAMPAGNE IS MADE

The process of making Champagne, known as the "traditional method" is very complex and labour-intensive.

Firstly, a still base wine is created by blending a range of wines from different grapes, vineyards and years to create a consistent house style. A solution of sugar and yeast is added, and the bottle is sealed with a crown capsule.

A second fermentation will then take place, creating more alcohol and CO₂. Since the CO₂ has nowhere to go, it is captured in the bottle and creates the bubbles.

The wines are then aged on the dead yeast, which gives it rich aromas of biscuit, brioche and pastry. The longer you leave the wine on its yeast, the more complex the wine will be. For Non-Vintage Champagne the minimum ageing on the yeast is 15 months and for Vintage the minimum is 36 months. The wine is then separated from the yeast sediment and closed with a Champagne cork before being sold.

BOLLINGER

This house was founded in 1829 and is still in the hands of the founding family. Known for their complexity and longevity, they have a range of 4 Champagnes from their non-vintage Special Cuvée to the vintage Vieilles Vignes Françaises. This latter, prestigious Champagne comes from ungrafted Pinot Noir vines and is produced in very small quantities in only the finest vintages. The majority of the wines at Bollinger are barrel fermented, giving a broad and round structure while maintaining a crisp freshness.

Shortened from Deutz Gelderman to Deutz, this house was established in 1838 and now belongs to the Roederer family. Deutz produces both Non-Vintage and Vintage Champagnes that are very elegant in style, as opposed to rich and robust. They own land in some of Champagne's best villages, Aÿ and Côtes des Blancs, which gives them plenty of control and thus can maintain such high quality.

Dating back to 1584, Gosset is the oldest known producer of wine in Champagne. Back in those days, their wines would not yet have been sparkling. They have small annual production of only 1.3 million bottles, focusing on quality rather than quantity. Gosset Champagnes feature a high proportion of Chardonnay grapes and their house style is very creamy, with aromas with hints of caramel and biscuit.

Founded in 1812, Laurent Perrier is family-run with sisters Alexandra and Stéphanie at the helm. Based in the heart of Champagne, Laurent Perrier has a pedigree of innovation, handcrafting a pioneering range of fine Champagnes that also abide by long-established traditions. Their house style is light, with great freshness and elegance. Their iconic rosé Champagne is one of few to be made by drawing the juice from black grapes in the vat, instead of the usual blending of red and white wines. Its delicious red berry flavours have made it a benchmark rosé Champagne.

Better known as "Ace of Spades" and part-owned by someone who goes by the name of "Jay-Z". But don't be fooled, there is substance and history behind the celebrity ownership and "bling" bottles. A father & son team who are respectively 10th & 11th generation owners, craft Armand de Brignac's prestige cuvées. Its 33 hectares of vines include some of the most lauded Crus in Champagne. Base wines are aged for one year in new French Oak. Each Champagne contains a blend of three vintages, bringing together the unique characters of the three harvests. ENGLISH SPARKLING WINE

NYETIMBER

Nyetimber is devoted exclusively to the holy trinity of Champagne grapes: Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier, all grown on the estate's chalk soils. A true pioneer that aims to make the finest English sparkling wine; one to rival the very best in the world. In its pursuit of excellence, no compromise is taken. As proof of this, winemaker Cherie Spriggs declared she would not be bottling a 2012 vintage as the quality of the grapes was not up to her high standards.

Whilst Champagne is usually the sparkling wine of choice on board luxury yachts, we have seen a rise in Prosecco orders the past few seasons and as labelling terms can be a bit confusing; the following overview might be helpful.

Prosecco is the name of the wine region and comes from the beautiful rolling hills of Veneto in Italy, near Valdobbiadene (pronounced Val-dob-ee-ah-den-ay) and Conegliano. It uses mostly the grape variety “Glera”, and sometimes smaller amounts of other local grapes. It’s fruity, often with hints of flowers, apples and pears. It has a lovely freshness with just a touch of sweetness which makes it very soft and easy-drinking.

The labelling term and quality of the Prosecco will depend on where the grapes are sourced:

Prosecco DOC – This is the most basic appellation for Prosecco and means the grapes come from the flatter land around Treviso and Trieste.

Prosecco Superiore DOCG – This is a better appellation as the grapes come from the homeland of Prosecco, around the towns of Conegliano and Valdobbiadene. Here the steeper slopes and altitude help produce better quality grapes with more concentrated flavours that last longer on the palate.

Prosecco Superiore di Cartizze DOCG or Prosecco Superiore di Rive DOCG – Cartize and Rive are the names of two hills that produce some of the very finest and most expensive Prosecco. Here there are much stricter rules around how it is made to ensure very high quality, creating much more complexity and richness on the palate.

If one were to crown a wine region as king, it would have to be Bordeaux. Home to the most famous wines in the world, the region wields an unparalleled influence in terms of its winemaking, with countless producers across the globe trying to replicate its style. Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot are the most important grapes here, but Cabernet Franc, Petit Verdot and Malbec are also grown. Not to forget the white wines in the region, made from Semillon and Sauvignon Blanc.

There are different communes in Bordeaux which offer slightly different styles of wine. Importantly, the region is divided into two by the Gironde River, forming the Left Bank and the Right Bank. Wines from the Right Bank such as those from Pomerol and Saint-Emilion are based on the soft grape variety Merlot. Wines from the Left Bank, in appellations such as Saint-Estèphe, Pauillac, Saint-Julien and Margaux, wines are all based on the more structured grape variety, Cabernet Sauvignon. Saint-Estèphe and Pauillac tend to have firmer tannins and more structure than the slightly softer Saint-Julien and elegant Margaux. Bordeaux is also home to the famous sweet wine from Sauternes.

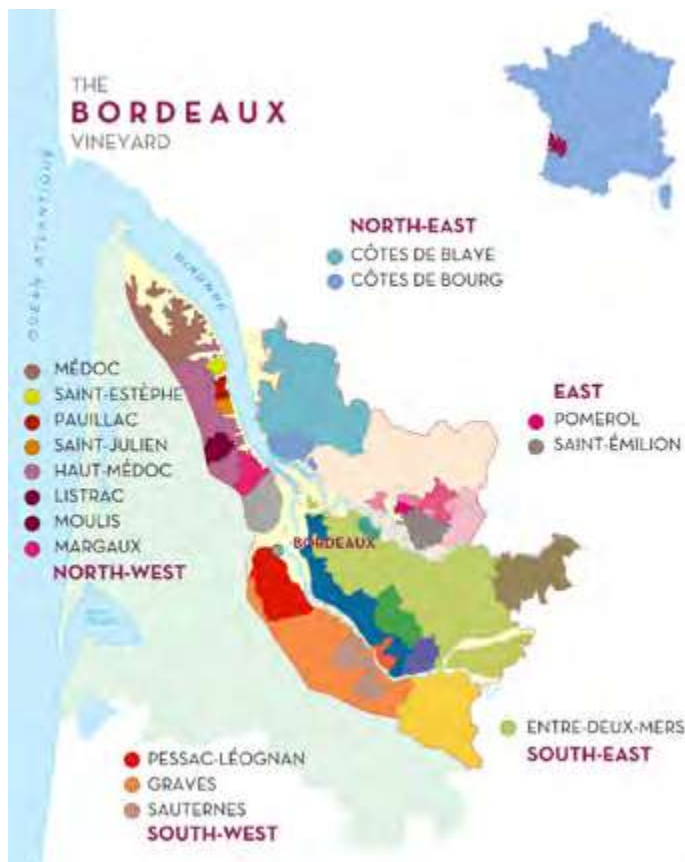

THE 1855 CLASSIFICATION

In 1855, the emperor Napoléon III requested an official list of the best wines from Bordeaux to display at the Paris Universal Exhibition. A panel of wine brokers ranked the red wines and sweet wines of Bordeaux according to a Château's reputation and market price. The resulting list has become known as the Bordeaux Wine Official Classification of 1855.

There are 61 Cru Classés in the classification, with the wines ranked into five levels from 1st to 5th growths (also known as Crus). All of the red wines that made it on the list came from the Medoc region, except one: Château Haut-Brion from Graves. The white wines, which were then of much less importance than red wine, were limited to the sweet varieties of Sauternes and Barsac and only ranked from 1st to 2nd growth.

This system has remained virtually intact, with only one change occurring to the classification when Château Mouton Rothschild was promoted from 2nd to 1st growth in 1973. It might be interesting to note that the owner of this Château was a very wealthy and influential man in the region.

Regardless of politics and the age of the classification, the 1st growths (of which there are only five) and the second growths are some of the best wines in the world.

CHÂTEAU LAFITE ROTHSCHILD

Château Lafite Rothschild is one of the most renowned wineries in the Médoc and also has one of the largest estates. The name Lafite comes from the Gascon term "la hite" meaning "small hill". The current owners, the Rothschilds, bought the property in 1866 and have invested heavily in the vineyard and cellar to maintain their excellent reputation. Their wines are often described as being very perfumed and elegant, compared to the other first growths which can be more powerful.

CHÂTEAU PETRUS

Robert Parker proclaims Château Pétrus to be “the undisputed king of Pomerol and probably the most famous red wine in the world”. The bottle’s label alone is instantly recognisable, with “PETRUS” emblazoned in bright red. The wine is widely regarded as being the absolute pinnacle of what can be achieved with the Merlot grape. Pétrus is Latin for Peter (who also features on the label), who guards the gates of heaven, which is perhaps appropriate considering many view this wine as “the holy grail”. Pétrus is largely responsible for elevating the reputation of the Pomerol appellation and is undoubtedly one of the most sought-after wines in the world.

FIRST GROWTHS

CHÂTEAU CHEVAL BLANC

Château Cheval Blanc is revered as having produced some truly remarkable Bordeaux wines. Located in the Saint Emilion appellation on Bordeaux's right bank, it is one of only four wineries to have been upgraded to the status of "Premier Grand Cru Classé (A)". Cheval Blanc is unusual in that it is Cabernet Franc-dominated (whereas elsewhere on the right bank the Merlot grape dominates) and is considered the world's best Cabernet Franc-based wine. Robert Parker argues this results in "a distinctive lighter, more delicate style" and "aromatic, long-lived wines that represent the quintessential, complex style of Bordeaux".

CHÂTEAU ANGELUS

Château Angelus is one of the largest estates on the Right Bank and is considered one of the most prestigious wines in Bordeaux. It was promoted to 1^{er} Grand Cru Classé A (the absolute top in this AOC) in the 1996 Saint-Émilion reclassification. The wine is matured in 100% new oak barrels for 18 months. The style of Château Angelus is pure velvet and silk, with luscious spicy dark fruits and liquorice. To enjoy it best, it needs at least five years age in bottle.

PAUILLAC

This famous commune is situated on the Left Bank of the Gironde river around the small town of Pauillac. The top wines from here are often considered the quintessence of Bordeaux and the famous wine writer Hugh Johnson clearly agrees: "If one had to single out one commune of Bordeaux to head the list, there would be no argument. It would be Pauillac." Furthermore, it includes also 3 of the 5 First Growths from the 1855 classification, giving additional notoriety to the area. The hallmarks for Pauillac wines are power, firm structure, a broad palate and depth. Cabernet Sauvignon is the predominant grape, but as with all red Bordeaux, Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Petit Verdot and Malbec are also used.

MARGAUX

Margaux contains 1,413 hectares of vineyards, making it the second largest appellation in the Haut-Médoc (after Saint-Estèphe). Also located on the Left Bank of Gironde with very thin and gravelly soils. The wines are famous for their fragrance and perfume and are considered more feminine and slender than the wines of Pauillac, for example. The most famous estate in this commune is Château Margaux. Cabernet Sauvignon is the predominant grape, but as with all red Bordeaux, Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Petit Verdot and Malbec are also used (though the latter two are used less extensively).

SAINT - ESTEPHE

Saint-Estèphe is the northernmost of the six communal appellations in Médoc. As in most of the Médoc area the soil is a mix between sand, gravel and clay in significant proportion for this commune and therefore the Cabernet struggles to ripen in some spots. This has resulted in greater plantings of Merlot which ripens a bit earlier. There are five classified growths of 1855 located within the appellation, with Cos d'Estournel and Montrose being the two most famous ones. The wines tend to show a certain austerity with slightly higher acidity than the other communes.

SAINT - JULIEN

Saint-Julien is located between the Margaux and Pauillac appellations on the Le Bank of the Gironde. There tend to be two main styles of wine: in the southern part of Saint-Julien the wines tend to be more 'Margaux like' (smooth and feminine), and in the north they are more powerful and sturdy. As for grape varieties, Cabernet Sauvignon is king in this commune with Merlot and the other classic Bordeaux varieties blended in for smoothness and complexity.

MEDOC AND HAUT MEDOC

Located on the Left Bank of the Gironde, these two appellations cover approximately 60km of its length. Its southern edge borders the city of Bordeaux, encompassing fifteen communes exclusive to the appellation. The soils in Haut-Médoc and Médoc are not as well draining as in the communes above and the wines are not as deep, long lived or concentrated as in the smaller, more famous appellations. However, there are excellent estates producing very complex and fine wines, with the most celebrated examples being La Lagune and Château Camensac. There are no estates from the 1855 classification within these two AOCs but several top producers of the Cru Bourgeois classification are found here.

PESSAC - LEOGNAN

Pessac-Léognan is located in the northern part of the Graves region, south of the city of Bordeaux. The white wines of Pessac are just as famous as the reds. The red wines are made predominantly of Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot, and the whites from Sauvignon Blanc and Semillon. One of the finest First Growths is found here: Château Haut-Brion. To complicate things, Pessac-Léognan created its own internal appellation of Grand Cru Classé in 1959. Typical tasting terms for red wines are blackcurrant and cedar in a restrained earthy style. The white wines are often barrel fermented and show aromas of apricot and nectarine when young are more toast and honey with age.

SAINT - EMILION

Saint-Emilion is the other prestigious appellation on the Right Bank, bordering Pomerol to the west. The wines are made of mainly Merlot and Cabernet Franc. As the climate here is slightly cooler and damper, with the soils less well drained than on the Le Bank, Cabernet Sauvignon can struggle to achieve full ripeness here. The quality of the wines from Saint-Emilion varies quite substantially and there is an internal classification to give an indication of the best wines. The top wines are divided into two groups, Premier Grand Cru Classés A and B. There are currently four wines with the highest A classification: Ausone, Angelus, Cheval Blanc and Pavie.

POMEROL

Pomerol is the smallest of the fine wine appellations in Bordeaux and is located in the Libournais region on the Right Bank. The wines produced here are based predominately on Merlot, with Cabernet Franc playing a supporting role. The soils have a higher content of clay than on the Left Bank which is suitable for the Merlot variety. Whilst it is now one of the most prestigious of the Bordeaux AOC, this reputation is fairly new, dating to the second half of the twentieth century. The reason behind this recent success is that at the time of the 1855 classification there were no châteaux included from the Right Bank. There is no internal classification within Pomerol but the uncrowned king is Château Pétrus.

WHITE BORDEAUX

DRY

Mostly famous for their red wines, some world class whites are made here as well. Around 7% of the yearly production in Bordeaux is dry white wine. The most famous are produced in the Pessac-Léognan appellation. These wines are truly great and can be compared with many of the world's best white wines. The grape varieties used are Semillon, Sauvignon Blanc and a small part of Muscadelle.

DRY

The wines will have significant oak influence having both been fermented and aged in barrels. The wines are crisp, firm and elegant showing aromas of chamomile, stone fruit and citrus with hints of creamy toasty oak influence.

SWEET - SAUTERNES

Sauternes is arguably the most famous region in the world for dessert wines. Wine is made from Semillon, Sauvignon Blanc, and Muscadelle grapes that have been affected by Botrytis cinerea, also known as 'noble rot'. This causes the grapes to become partially raisined and covered with a special mould, resulting in concentrated and distinctively flavoured wines. Only the affected grapes are used, so every harvest it is necessary to make several passages in the vineyard to select only the noble rotted bunches. The wines are then fermented in oak and aged for 12-24 months. Château d'Yquem is the most famous wine from this region.

CHÂTEAU D'YQUEM

Chateau d'Yquem is widely considered as the greatest dessert wine in the world. The estate is located on the highest hill in Sauternes and therefore benefits from the best growing conditions in the whole area. The wine is made from 80% Semillon and 20% Sauvignon Blanc. Only completely botrytized grapes are harvested by a team of 150 pickers for 110 hectares. The yields are extremely low; on average one vine gives one bottle of wine. Fermentation takes place in 100% new French oak, aged for 36 months.

Top End
Red + White
Burgundy
Beaujolais

Burgundy, or “Bourgogne”, is a complex wine region home to some of the most expensive wines in the world. There are five wine growing areas: Chablis, Côte de Nuits, Côte de Beaune, Côte Chalonnaise and Macônnais. Chardonnay, the world’s most famous white grape variety, originated from Burgundy. All red wines are made from the delicate Pinot Noir.

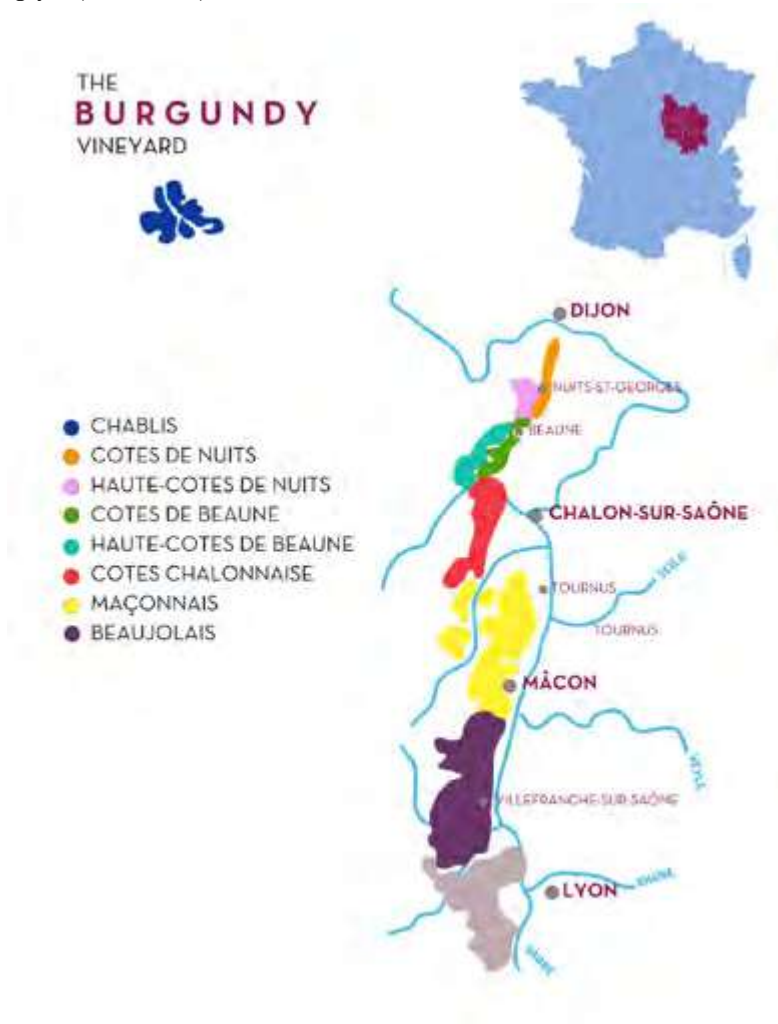

Here the vineyard classification system really comes into its own. Wines using grapes from the flattest land are classed as generic “Bourgogne”. As the slopes begin to rise, the wines are classified by their village appellation. In the middle of the slope, where the vines receive the best sunlight, the wines are classified as Premier Cru or, even better, Grand Cru.

The heart of Burgundy is the Côte d’Or, which is split into the Côte de Nuits in the north and the Côte de Beaune in the south. The Côte de Nuits is known for its fuller body, longest living red wines. The most famous villages are Chambolle-Musigny, Gevrey-Chambertin, Morey-Saint-Denis, Nuits-Saint-Georges, Vosne-Romanée and Vougeot.

Great villages for white include Chassagne-Montrachet, Meursault and Puligny-Montrachet. These tend to be aged in oak barrels and are fabulously complex and rich. Famous names to remember for reds here are Volnay – perfumed and elegant with soft strawberry fruit and tannins, and Pommard – the “Pomerol of Burgundy”, offering more structure and body.

Chablis is the northernmost wine area of Burgundy, creating only white wines that are quite different to the Côte d’Or. Its cool climate and special soil, called Kimeridgian clay, give the wines a crisp acidity. Unlike the Côte d’Or, little or no oak is used here, creating light bodied wines with aromas of citrus fruit, green apples and minerals. Further south in Beaujolais, the grape Gamay is used to make easy-drinking, juicy and fruity red wines.

TOP END BURGUNDY

Please note that given the rarity of the following wines, prices and vintages are available upon request.

DOMAINE DE LA ROMANÉE-CONTI

Domaine de la Romanée-Conti possesses an almost mythical status in the wine world. It is held in such high regard, its wines so readily exalted, that "DRC" has become a byword for exclusivity and supreme quality. It is no surprise that prices for the domaine's wines are stratospheric – and continue to rise – as collectors seek out bottles that are made in tiny quantities. All of DRC's holdings are in grand cru vineyards, two of which – La Romanée-Conti and La Tâche – are "monopoles". Below are the most sought-after wines from DRC's stellar range of eight grands crus.

LA ROMANÉE-CONTI

The jewel in the crown of any wine collection, La Romanée-Conti is also the most expensive wine in the world. The fact that the domaine is named after this vineyard – the only estate in Burgundy that is legally allowed to do so – indicates the significance of this fabled plot of land. Robert Parker proclaims that "the startlingly perfumed, kaleidoscopically complex, supremely elegant Romanée-Conti truly exhibits a categorical difference from any other wines on earth."

LA TÂCHE

DRC's second monopole vineyard, the status of La Tâche is almost as legendary as La Romanée-Conti. Stylistically, it tends to be the more flamboyant of the two wines: exotic, rich and complex. This is partly due to the range of terroirs that the 6-hectare vineyard encompasses, with pebbly limestone at the top of the slope and a higher proportion of clay at the bottom. A truly remarkable wine.

RICHEBOURG

Richebourg is an 8-hectare grand cru vineyard in Vosne-Romanée, of which DRC owns almost half (with the remainder split between ten other owners). The vineyard lies on the same part of the slope as La Romanée-Conti, and thus the two share a similar terroir. Richebourg is a full-bodied, muscular and structured wine, earning a reputation as one of Burgundy's top grand cru vineyards.

GRANDS-ÉCHÉZEUX

Yet another of Vosne-Romanée's grand cru vineyards, Grands-Échézeaux is often overshadowed by the more famous wines in the DRC lineup. However, it is a magnificent wine in its own right. The vineyard is roughly one-third the size of its neighbour, Échézeaux, and is generally considered to yield higher quality wine that is full-bodied, deep and concentrated. This is a wine that should not be overlooked.

DOMAINE LEFLAIVE

A producer that is renowned for making some of the finest white wines in the world, Domaine Leflaive sits at the top of the tree in Puligny-Montrachet. Furthermore, Anne-Claude Leflaive was a trailblazer of the movement towards biodynamic winemaking in Burgundy in the 1990s. With an enviable array of holdings in some of the most revered vineyards, below are just three examples from the domaine's impressive range.

What Leflaive is to Puligny-Montrachet, Ramonet is to Chassagne-Montrachet. Like Leflaive, Domaine Ramonet produces a range of white wines from village level all the way up to the fabled grand cru Montrachet. Leading wine critic Clive Coates MW asserts that "Ramonet has no parallels, no equals: it is unique and magnificent".

DOMAINE DAUVISSAT

The only domaine in Chablis making wines that rival those of Raveneau is Dauvissat. Strict pruning of the vines by Vincent Dauvissat and his team is one contributing factor to the consistent quality of his wines, with relatively low yields. Vines have been farmed biodynamically since 2002 although the domaine has not sought official certification.

DOMAINE ROULOT

"God invented Chardonnay so that he could drink wines like this". So says leading wine critic Neal Martin of Domaine Roulot, the producer that sets the gold standard in Meursault. Since taking over in 1989, Jean-Marc Roulot has leaned towards a style of wines that offer a profound sense of focus, purity and restraint. This is in contrast to the richness and opulence that can be found elsewhere in the appellation.

Meursault

DOMAINE DES COMTES LAFON

The cellars of this famed domaine are believed to be the deepest and coolest in Burgundy. The domaine owns plots in the best vineyards in Meursault (and Volnay) and now farms according to biodynamic principles. Wine writer Jasper Morris MW notes: 'this is the very pinnacle of White Burgundy with superlative fruit, power, complexity and total harmony being the wines' hallmarks.'

DOMAINE BONNEAU DE MARTRAY

Bonneau de Martray is the only domaine in Burgundy to produce wine exclusively from grand cru vineyards. It also happens to be one of the foremost white wine producers in the Côte d'Or, with the largest holding (9.5 hectares) in the famous grand cru vineyard Corton-Charlemagne. Biodynamic farming is employed to create this magnificent wine.

DOMAINE LEROY

Lalou Bize-Leroy heads up Domaine Leroy and is often referred to as the queen of Burgundy. Formerly a co-director at Domaine de la Romanée-Conti, she now owns 22 hectares of vines in Burgundy, most of which are premier and grand cru. Farmed biodynamically since its inception, severe pruning results in powerfully concentrated wines produced in miniscule quantities. Consequently, they are extremely sought after.

DOMAINE ARMAND ROUSSEAU

The most renowned estate in the village of Gevrey-Chambertin – and indeed one of the most illustrious names in Burgundy – Domaine Armand Rousseau owns more vines in the grand cru vineyard of Chambertin than any other grower. Rousseau's Chambertin and Clos St. Jacques are considered by many to be the pinnacle of terroir expression. It follows that these wines are some of the most collectable in the world.

DOMAINE DUJAC

By Burgundian standards, Dujac is a relatively youthful domaine, having been created in 1968. Located in the village of Morey-St-Denis and with 11.5 hectares of vineyards, it is another of Burgundy's most acclaimed producers. Dujac has holdings in seven grand cru vineyards, and the house style tends towards exceptional structure, fragrance and longevity.

DOMAINE GEORGES ROUMIER

12 hectares of vines make up this celebrated producer's holdings in the village in Chambolle Musigny. Roumier's status as one of the region's heavyweight domaines can be largely attributed to Christophe Roumier, who has been at the helm since 1982. The estate's vines have a high average age and are naturally low yielding. New oak is used sparingly to allow the terroir of these top vineyards to assert itself.

DOMAINE PONSOT

An estate with a long and rich history, Domaine Ponsot was established by William Ponsot in 1872. A sign of this heritage is that the average age of vines across the domaine is 50 years old. The domaine's range consists of no less than 12 grand cru vineyards, as well as a number of premier cru and village level wines. It also has the largest holding in the much-feted Clos de la Roche vineyard. Stylistically, Domaine Ponsot's wines are known for their power, concentration and richness.

DOMAINE JACQUES PRIEUR

Although it perhaps doesn't quite have the reputation of some of its peers, the level of quality coming from Domaine Jacques Prieur should not be underestimated. The estate has undergone a remarkable transformation since 1988, when Jean-Pierre Labruyère bought a majority stake and installed the legendary Nadine Gublin as winemaker. The reds display an underlying power and richness while the whites tend to be rounded and hedonistic.

As well as converting to biodynamic winemaking back in 1998, Jean-Louis Trapet introduced lower-yielding rootstocks and green harvesting in an effort to get the most out of his vines. DOMAINE DUGAT-PY

Based in Gevrey-Chambertin, vines at the famed Domaine Dugat-Py have an average age of almost 70 years, with some being over 100 years old. Even more impressive is that Dugat's winemaking heritage can be traced back to 1645. The estate is now run by Bernard Dugat who strives for elegance over opulence in his wines. Despite being approachable in their youth, they really come into their own after 5-8 years of maturity.

DROUHIN

Drouhin is most famous for its wines from the Clos de Mouches Vineyards. In 1973, the Beaune Clos des Mouches ranked fifth in the famous 'Judgment of Paris' wine competition between ten French and Californian red wines. Drouhin has an organic and biodynamic approach to winemaking, with all wines since the 2009 vintage officially certified organic. Today, more than half of Drouhin's wines are made with estate grown grapes. This control keeps Drouhin among Burgundy's finest producers.

WILLIAM FEVRE - CHABLIS

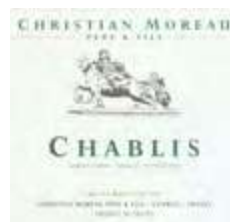

William Fevre has grown into one of the biggest landowners in Chablis, with 51 hectares of prestigious vineyards. They have set the benchmark for Chablis, the appellation known for its fresh, elegant and mineral white wines made from 100% Chardonnay grapes. Many of Fevre's wines are not kept in oak, but for the Premiers Crus and the Grands Crus they put a proportion of the wines in old wood barrels to add extra complexity and texture. Since being purchased by the Henriot Champagne, William Fevre has seen considerable investment which is reflected in the increased quality of the range.

Gigondas

Despite the fact that the Rhône Valley produces some of the best wines in the world, this region tends to be forgotten in the yachting industry. The Rhône is one of the great wine rivers of the world, beginning its life in Switzerland and making its way through France to become the central feature of the Rhône wine region lying between Lyon and Avignon. Though the Rhône is thought of as one wine region, it falls into two parts - the Northern and Southern Rhône. Each has a different climate and grows different grape varieties.

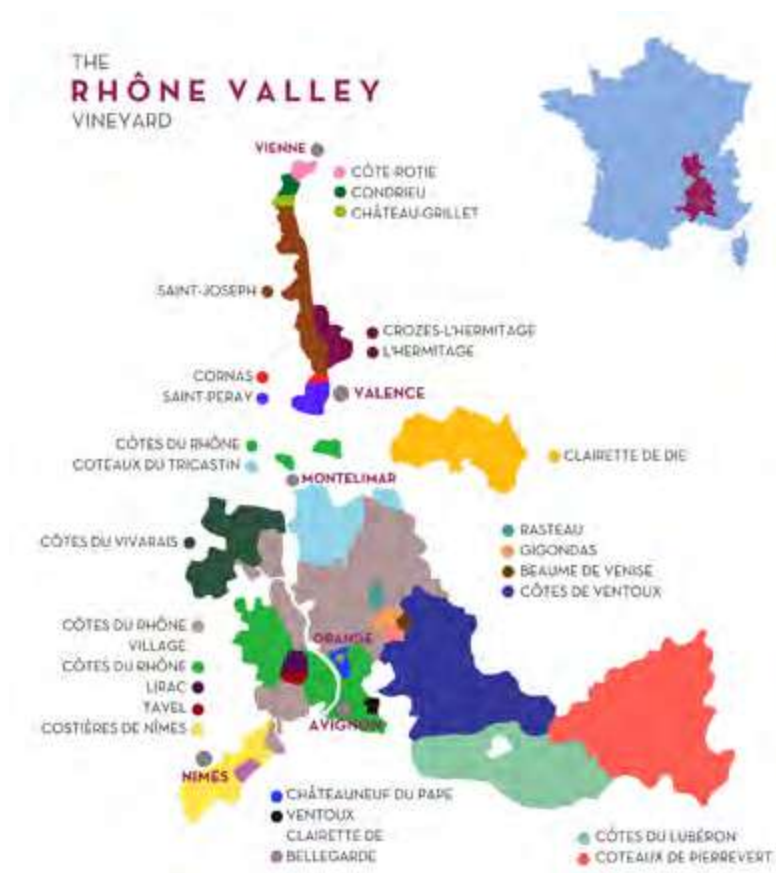

THE NORTHERN RHÔNE

The Northern Rhône is a land of steep slopes carved into granite hillsides and planted with the grape variety Syrah (also known as Shiraz). The wines are dark, firm and full-bodied with black fruit and spicy notes. The top villages here are Côte-Rôtie and Hermitage.

In the North is the region of Condrieu and the tiny vineyards of Château Grillet, where they grow the grape Viognier to create lovely, soft wines with floral and peachy aromas. In Hermitage, one can also find some stunning wines with long ageing potential made from Marsanne and Roussanne.

THE SOUTHERN RHÔNE

In the South, the steep slopes open out to flatter land which gets baking hot in the summer. Wines here are made from a blend of different grapes and are much softer with red fruit flavours. Popular grapes are Grenache, Syrah, Mourvèdre and Carignan but there are many more allowed. The village of Châteauneuf-du-Pape produces the best wines, though Gigondas and Vacqueras are also very good.

GUIGAL

Guigal is famous in the Northern Rhône, particularly for its Côte-Rôtie. Guigal makes single vineyard wines La Mouline, La Landonne and La Turquie, often nicknamed the "La-La" wines which are highly sought after. Côte-Rôtie is dominated by the grape Syrah, alongside a small addition of Viognier to give it a slight perfumed and floral aroma. Guigal was also key in resurrecting the region of Condrieu, which was close to disappearing, where they make rich, full-bodied wines made from 100% Viognier with aromas of apricots and violets.

Michel Ogier is a relative newcomer to the top league of Rhone producers, but has cemented his excellent reputation prior to handing over to his son, Stéphane. In the past, the entire harvest was sold to larger companies such as Guigal and Chapoutier, but in 1980 the family decided to make wine in their own name. Stéphane puts a greater focus on single vineyard expression. Stylistically, the wines of Ogier tend to lean towards finesse and elegance rather on broad structure and power – as is the case for some producers in the area.

Chave is one of the oldest names in the world when it comes to fine wine; the family has been producing wine in the Northern Rhone valley since 1481. Today, the estate is managed by Jean-Louis Chave. In the early days, the family made wine in Saint Joseph but in 1865 they bought vineyards on the hill of Hermitage. Out of the 14ha they own in Hermitage, 10ha is planted with Syrah and 4ha with Rousanne and Marsanne for the Hermitage Blanc.

CHÂTEAU RAYAS

If one had to name the "Pétras of the Southern Rhône" it would have to be Château Rayas. This legendary estate in Châteauneuf du Pape is producing extremely sought-after, glorious wines made of 100% Grenache. The 23ha estate is located on sandy clay soils, giving a cooler microclimate which allows for slow maturation of the grapes – resulting in elegance and perfume. The style of the final product is perhaps best captured by Jeff Leve: "The bouquet is haunting. The purity of fruit can be other-worldly, the textures are extraordinarily silky, elegant and sensuous."

The wines are beautiful and come highly rated from many wine critics. "This estate, under the leadership of Sebastien and Christophe Jaume, continues to be one of the reference point producers for relatively modern styled Châteauneuf du Papes. CLOS DES PAPES - CHÂTEAUNEUF-DU-PAPE

Famous wines from Châteauneuf-du-Pape, made by the extraordinary winemaker Paul Avril. Grapes are sourced from 20 different plots of land, from low-yielding vines to give the best concentrated flavours. They never use new oak, resulting in elegant but powerful wines. Production is kept very low at only 1000 cases per vintage making some of the better vintages sometimes difficult to find. To find the true character of these wines, they are best drunk with a little age and can even last for decades. The 2005 vintage won the best red wine in the world in the Wine Spectator's yearly competition.

SOUTHERN FRANCE

Provence
Bandol
Bellet
Languedoc

With more than 300 days of sun per year and mild winters, Provence benefits from a lovely Mediterranean climate that is perfect for growing grapes. The region is most famous for its pale pink rosé (although there are also great red and white wines to be found). With its delicate colour, wonderful freshness and light fruity flavour, Provençal rosé really is the perfect drink for a hot summer's day and a must-have wine for a yacht. The wine is usually made from a blend of grape varieties including Syrah, Carignan, Cinsault and Grenache.

Domaines Ott is the most famous producer in the region, however recently there has been a renaissance in high quality rosé, so there are many other excellent producers to choose from including Château d'Esclans and Château Gassier. There is a lot of innovation happening here, with winemakers experimenting with the use of oak, organic farming and biodynamics.

CHÂTEAU D'ESCLANS

Château d'Esclans was founded by Sacha Lichine in 2006, and the impact this estate has had on the reputation of rosé wine throughout Provence should not be underestimated. With the launch of ultra-premium rosé, it is made in a Burgundian way (with oak fermentation and oak ageing), and the extreme focus on quality and with high prices has created a phenomenon in the area. According to Andrew Jefford, "This is the best chance pink wine ever had".

The Gassier family bought Château Gassier and its 40 hectares at the foot of Saint-Victoire in 1982. In 2004, the Gassiers and the Advini Group decided to join forces and run the estate together. This merger gave access to investments that has increased the quality of the wines even further. Both rosés are very elegant, showing excellent fruit and aromatics. The 946 has received some oak ageing, giving a creamier richer mouthfeel and an ever so slight spiciness. Beautifully integrated oak which can be difficult to achieve in a rosé. Lovely wines!

CHÂTEAU LÉOUBE

An impeccable and beautiful estate run by Romain Ott produces wines with purity, focus and finesse. The two rosés are some of the most delicate and elegant in the area and the estate is certified organic. Romain is against the fashion of very protective winemaking when no oxygen is allowed in contact with the wine. Instead, he wants to produce wines that also can be enjoyed a few years after harvest as well as being beautiful and crisp early on too.

Château Minuty is located only 10 minutes from the town of Saint Tropez and is owned by the Matton-Farnet family who have been producing wine in Provence for three centuries. It is considered one of the top estates in the area and in 1955 it was classified as Grand Cru of Provence together with 23 other estates. They make four different quality ranges and the 'Or' series contains the flagship wine for each colour. The 'Rose et Or' is one of the finest rosés from Provence and is made of 50 year-old Grenache vines, giving great complexity and depth to the wine.

Founded in the 13th century by the Knights Templar, the Commanderie de Peyrassol covers an area of some 850 hectares dotted with oak trees and olive groves, with 93 hectares dedicated to growing grapes. Since 2003 Alban Cacaret has managed the Commanderie de Peyrassol alongside his uncle, Philippe Austruy, who has owned the estate since 2001. SAINT-ANDRÉ DE FIGUIÈRE

Saint André de Figuière is a family owned estate with an impeccable reputation, run by Alan Combard and his children. Alan was born in Provence but before he settled down in the region, he made wine in Chablis for more than 20 years. Perhaps that explains the elegance, purity and minerality of both the white and the top rosé wines. The red wines expose a typicity of Provence in the form of crunchy red and black fruit, sage/bay leaf notes with excellent fruit concentration.

DOMAINE RICHAUME

Domaine Richeaume is located at the foot of the Saint-Victoire Mountain, which is considered one of the best areas in Côtes de Provence thanks to the cooling influence created by the mountain. It is owned and run by the Hoesch family, with the father and son having made wine here for a combined 40 years. Whilst the rest of the region is surfing the wave of rosé (which represents near 90% of the production in Côtes de Provence), the Hoesch see red. "Personally, I would prefer not to make rosé at all" says Sylvain Hoesch who currently runs the estate. But as some of his clients request it, he makes around 5% every year. La Columelle is the top wine of the estate which contains the best of both New World and Old World styled wines. It offers juicy, ripe, concentrated fruit balanced by freshness, a slight herbal earthiness and phenomenal use of oak. This is the perfect wine to suggest to charter guests when they are after something local and they don't have a specific producer in mind. In our opinion, this wine is the Sassaia of Provence!

CHÂTEAU BARBEYROLLES

Château Barbeyrolles was acquired in 1977 by Régine Sumeire. This 12ha vineyard, located at the foot of the village in Gassin, is a preserved spot of outstanding natural beauty in the gulf of Saint Tropez. Régine is considered a pioneer in the world of rosé and Barbeyrolles is producing some of the best wine in the area. With a very natural and hands-off approach, the grapes are organically grown with some biodynamic sprays as well. Grapes are hand-harvested in the cool of the morning and pressed whole – bunch to maximize elegance and freshness – something that is clearly shown in the glass.

Planted at 350 meters of altitude in protective terraces, this allows the vines here to enjoy warm, sunny days and cool nights, bringing freshness and balance to the wines. The château is partnered up with the Family Perrin, one of the leading French wine producing families. This teaming up has helped with the winemaking, viticulture and introduction of the latest equipment. This, combined with an attention to detail at every stage, has resulted in high scores from the wine critics. This estate is also well known for its rather famous owners, Angelina Jolie and Brad Pitt. In light of recent events you may well be seeing it in an estate agent's window soon!

CHÊNE BLEU

A beautiful estate with a vinicultural history dating back to the Middle Ages. Chêne Bleu is located in Dentelles de Montmirail in Provence, near Gigondas, at around 550m altitude with mostly north-facing slopes and well-drained limestone soils. This allows for slow ripening of the grapes which in turn means both maximum flavour development and retention of freshness. In 1993 the estate was bought by a passionate couple (Xavier and Nicole Rolet) who have since worked meticulously and spared no expense in making wines of absolute top quality.

CHÂTEAU LA TOUR DE L'ÉVÊQUE

Also acquired by the Sumeire family in 1958, this estate is today considered one of the key producers in Provence. This reputation is largely down to the iconic wine, Pétale de Rose that was created in the mid-1980s by Régine Sumeire with the aim of producing the most delicate, perfumed and elegant rosé possible. All grapes are hand-harvested and whole-bunch pressed in order to produce a very light and fragrant wine.

THE BANDOL REGION

Bandol is a key appellation in Provence, but as opposed to the larger Côtes de Provence, this region is equally famous for its complex, deep red wines as it is for its fragrant and well-structured rosés. The main grape here is Mourvèdre, which is a rather powerful variety with firm tannins and aromas of black brambly fruit and roasted smoky herbs. It needs plenty of sun and heat to ripen, which makes Bandol the perfect spot with its sun-drenched terraces near the sea.

CHÂTEAU DE PIBARNON

The Pibarnon vineyard is a small paradise in Provence, extending over 52 organically cultivated hectares. Vines are cared for according to organic principles, yet the estate is not officially certified. "Château de Pibarnon fashions some of the top wines from this incredible appellation. Any reader wanting to taste the best expression of Bandol should get on this estate's bandwagon, as the price has yet to catch up to the quality" (Robert Parker).

After the Second World War, Lucien embarked on a tireless crusade to promote the wines of Tempier internationally and to have Bandol recognized alongside the finest wines of France.

Pouilly-Fumé Sancerre

Loire is a very exciting region where white, red, dry, sweet and sparkling wines are produced. Some of the wines from Loire are world famous and some are the best kept secrets in the world of wine.

Sancerre and Pouilly-Fumé are familiar names to most wine lovers. Made from the grape variety Sauvignon Blanc, these white wines are crisp and refreshing with aromas of gooseberries, lime and minerals. Though Pouilly-Fumé can only produce white wine, the Sancerre region also produces light reds and rosés made with the Pinot Noir grape. Typically, these wines are best drunk young and not made for ageing. Further west in Touraine, there is another white wine producing appellation called Vouvray, using the grape Chenin Blanc, which makes fantastic wines with great ageing potential.

DIDIER DAGUENEAU

Didier Dagueneau used to be known as the "wild man of Pouilly", not only for his exuberant personality but also for his radical ideas. His dedication to show the world what the Sauvignon Blanc grape was capable of made him cut the yields by 50%, receiving biodynamic certification in 1993, and pay relentless attention to all other production aspects. Tragically enough he died in an accident in 2008 and the production of his legendary wines is today overseen by his son Louis – Benjamin who continues with the same dedication.

This is the largest and arguably the most famous Pouilly-Fumé estate around. It has been in the hands of the Comte Lafond and Ladoucette families since 1787 when the Comte Lafond purchased the estate from the illegitimate daughter of the French king, Louis XV. They make several high-quality wines but it's the Baron de L that is the most prominent in the yachting industry; a very fine, elegant crisp wine with true minerality and complexity.

Rooted in the village of Chavignol, on the greatest terroirs of Sancerre and Pouilly-Fumé, they work on a mosaic of many vine plots. Each plot is isolated and worked in respect of its origin to reveal, in the most precise and true way, the expression of its terroir - either Kimmeridgian marls, Flint or Limestone Clay soils. The wines are elegant, complex and show true sense of place.

VACHERON

The Vacheron family have been influential in the Sancerre since the turn of the century, producing both white and red wines using organic and biodynamic farming methods. Their white Sancerre, made with 100% Sauvignon Blanc grapes is vibrant with zesty gooseberry flavours and a long, elegant, mineral finish. They are also well known for their red Sancerre made from Pinot Noir, which are light bodied and delicately perfumed with red berry aromas.

This historic estate traces its roots back to 1396. It is currently owned by the Comte d'Estutt d'Assy. His ancestors came here from Scotland the 15th century to help future King Charles VII of France during the Hundred Years War. But is not only their history that is deep and complex, this quality is found in all their wines and especially the top cuvées which are like dense liquid stone. Since some years back the renowned consultant wine maker and Professor of Oenology, Denis Dubourdieu is consulting here and his influence has made the wines even more aromatic and pure.

PASCAL JOLIVET

Pascal Jolivet is a very dynamic and avant-garde producer in the Loire Valley. He started making his Grand Vins du Val de Loire in 1982, later established his own Maison in 1987. Today the vineyard covers 28 ha in Sancerre and Pouilly-Fumé. To keep up with demand for some of their entry level wines, they also purchase fruit from long-term contract growers. The range of wines is extremely extensive with two of the most exclusive ones: "Exception" - made of very ripe grapes from three top sites in Sancerre like Mont Damné and Clos du Roy, and "Sauvage" - more racy and mineral in style and shows a fine linear structure.

FRANÇOIS COTAT

François Cotat produces some of the most complex and age worthy wines in Sancerre from a tiny 3ha estate located in Chavignol, famous for having some of the best soils of Sancerre. Given the steep slopes, all harvesting is done by hand and grape maturity is pushed to the maximum for flavour development and depth. In the winery, François employs a very “hands off” approach, with natural yeasts and slow fermentation in used oak barrels. Although Sancerre is traditionally consumed whilst youthful, the wines from Cotat have a remarkable ageing potential.

DOMAINE HUET

If one were to single out the emblematic estate of Vouvray, it would have to be Domaine Huet. Gaston Huet and his wife built up this world-famous domaine in the years following its creation by Victor Huet, his father, in 1928. Gaston took over management in 1947 after having been a war hero and prisoner during the Second World War. The wines are all made of Chenin Blanc and the style of wine will depend on the vintage and timing of the harvest. They range from dry to off-dry and fully sweet, but all maintain a firm, crisp acidity which gives focus and ageing potential to the wines.

Pinot Gris
Gewurtztraminer
Riesling

In eastern France lies a small wine region nestled between the protective Vosges Mountains and the Rhine River along the border of Germany. The long dry summers are perfect for growing the white aromatic grape varieties Riesling, Gewürztraminer, Pinot Gris and Muscat. Wines are bottled in the slim Alsatian flutes and the grape variety are written on the label. The Rieslings are normally dry, un-oaked with very pure fruit flavours and the grape are richer often with some sweetness.

The term “Grand Cru” means the grapes have come from a superior vineyard site. You may see also here “Sélection de Grains Noble” - made from grapes affected by noble rot, always be sweet and “Vendage Tardive” - using late harvest grapes, giving a medium sweet wine. Both are excellent matches with Foie Gras.

ZIND HUMBRECHT

This Domaine has vines in 4 Grands Crus areas and 6 individual single vineyard sites spread out over the geological patchwork of the Alsatian wine region. Using the different sites, the expression of terroir is reinforced by cultivating organically and according to biodynamic principles, they have been certified since 2002. Winegrowers from Father to Son since 1620 it is currently being run by Olivier Humbrecht while their Ardennes workhorse Nikita takes care of ploughing the soils!

TRIMBACH

Established in 1626 the Trimbach house is one of the eldest in the region and is currently run by the 12th generation of the family. They have full control over all aspects of wine making from planting to bottling resulting a severe quality control. In terms of style, Trimbach is famous for a more restrained and steely style than other generous and round. Or as Hubert Trimbach puts it in his own words; "Concentrated not heavy; fruity, not sweet; bracing rather than fat; polite rather than voluptuous". The most legendary of their wines is Clos Saint Hune, a small single vineyard that has been in the family for over 200 years. It is widely regarded as one of the top Rieslings of the world.

ITALY

Piedmont
Tuscany
Veneto

Italy is the largest producer of wines in the world, producing five billion litres annually. They have over 1000 of their own indigenous grape varieties, making Italy a truly unique wine country with wines often named after the place they come from. In Piedmont one has the great wines of Barolo and Barbaresco made from the Nebbiolo grape. Moving east to Veneto one can find Amarone della Valpolicella, luxurious silky and full-bodied reds made with mostly Corvina. Chianti and Brunello are famous in Tuscany, made from the Sangiovese grape. There has also been a rise in "Super Tuscans", highly demanded wines which don't use traditional grapes but instead use the Bordeaux grape varieties Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot.

Since then Angelo Gaja has been accredited with revolutionizing wine making in the region and showed the world what Barbaresco was capable of. They continue to produce some of Piedmont's finest reds along with beautiful whites, Gaja & Rey for example is arguably the best white wine in Italy.

VIETTI

The Vietti family has been producing wine in Barolo for four generations and was one of the first to vinify grapes from single vineyards in the 1950s. At the time this was unheard of but is now almost standard practice in much of the region. With distinguishing labels designed each year by artists, Vietti produce some of the best examples of Barolo. The estate was purchased in 2015 by the Krause family from the US.

CERETTO

One of the most progressive wine makers based in the heart of Piedmont. The Ceretto name is synonymous with estate-grown, carefully produced wines that express true varietal character with purity and elegance. They early developed the concept of single vineyards, especially in Barolo where their Bricco Rocche is the top wine. They also produce a lovely crisp and fragrant white of the grape Arneis called Blange. Recently Ceretto has been increasing their biodynamic cultivation although they are not part of any certification.

ALDO CONTERNO

Having worked alongside his brother Giovanni, Aldo Conterno decided in 1969 to forge his own winemaking path and set up his own estate. He has since gone on to achieve legendary status in Piedmont. Best known for its single vineyard Barolos, the estate's production has been deliberately reduced in recent years in a constant pursuit of quality. Old vines create elegant, rich, wonderfully balanced wines.

Another top name in Barolo, Bruno Giacosa's wines display an enviable suppleness and elegance. There is an extensive range of wine produced, however Giacosa's most revered cuvées are the selection of riservas with their distinctive red labels. Wine writer Steven Brook says of these wines: "it sometimes seems as though [they] flowed from the vineyard into the bottle without human intervention".

TENUTA DELL'ORNELLAIA

Since their 1st vintage in 1985 Ornellaia is considered one of Italy's best Bordeaux style red wines and is known as one of the "first growths" of Tuscany. It is made of Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Cabernet Franc and a fraction of Petit Verdot. It is also home to the 100% Merlot, Masseto, voluptuous rare and highly sought after.

SASSICAIA - TENUTA SAN GUIDO

Although several wines claim to be "the first Super Tuscan," most would agree that this title belongs to Sassicaia. The owner, Mario Incisa della Rocchetta, planted Cabernet Sauvignon already in 1944 on this estate which has similar soils to Bordeaux. In addition to Cabernet Sauvignon the wine also contains around 15% Cabernet Franc. At first, the wine was intended for personal consumption but the 1968 vintage was released to the public to universal acclaim and is since considered one of the top wines of Italy.

MONTEVERRO

This Super Tuscan only planted its first vines in 2004, yet Robert Parker described the 2010 flagship vintage as "absolutely stunning" awarding the wine 96 points. A huge achievement. The passionate owners are certainly living up to their goal of creating a "Premier Grand Cru" of Tuscany. Hand harvested grapes and the application of only the most modern wine making techniques combined with the skills of world-renowned wine maker Michel Rolland has garnered high praise already Matching and exceeding their Super Tuscan rivals such as Sassicaia with the critics. It is surely only a matter of time that Monteverro is regarded with the same prestigious esteem as these others with consumers.

CASANOVA DI NERI

Despite being a relative newcomer (founded in 1971), Casanova di Neri has become one of the most-respected wineries of Montalcino. It has a fairly modern approach in terms of wine making resulting in wines with plenty of lush fruit. Their wine continuously receives high ratings from renowned critics throughout the world. In 2006 for example, the Wine Spectator named their Brunello di Montalcino Tenuta Nuova 2001 the world's top wine, calling it "one of the best examples of the recent winemaking renaissance in Tuscany".

The roundness and suppleness of the Merlot combines well with the structure and elegance of Sangiovese. They also produce a traditional Brunello di Montalcino wine called Luce Brunello, made with 100% Sangiovese grapes grown around the slopes of Montalcino. Wines here must be aged for five years, with at least 2 years in barrel and display typical Tuscan character.

ANGELO GAJA - TUSCANY

Angelo Gaja made history by planting Chardonnay and Sauvignon grapes on prime Barbaresco land. Gaja & Rey was the first white wine he produced, named after Angelo's daughter Gaia and grandmother Rey. Made from 100% Chardonnay, it has been aged 8 months in barriques to give a rich nose of toast and vanilla, a full body and ripe fruit flavours. The wine Rossj-Bass is made primarily from Chardonnay with a touch of Sauvignon Blanc. Bass is Piedmontese for the Italian "basso" meaning low, a name derived from the vineyards position. He also makes an herbaceous and aromatic Sauvignon Blanc called Alteni di Brassica, a rare gem for this region.

ANTINORI - UMBRIA

The Antinori owned Castello Della Sala Estate lies in Umbria just a short distance away from Tuscany. Meticulous attention to detail is used throughout the winemaking process, temperature control is given particular focus in an effort to maintain the aromatic freshness of the grapes, these measures include a refrigerated conveyor belt for the grapes arriving at the winery! A blend of Chardonnay and Grechetto goes into the flagship wine Cervaro Della Sala which is then fermented and aged for 5 months in oak barrels. The toasty notes of the oak blend harmoniously with the notes of tropical and citrus fruit. First produced in 1997 Conte Della Vipera is a blend of Sauvignon Blanc and Semillon, a vibrant vein of acidity gives the wine excellent freshness.

LA SCOLCA - GAVI

This estate lies in the region of Gavi di Gavi in southern Piedmont. It is made of 100% Cortese which is a delicate fragrant variety offering crisp acid, aromas of white peach, blossom and citrus. The average age of the vines is 60 years which adds to the concentration and finesse of the wines of La Scolca. The Estate is today run by Giorgio Soldati (the founder's great-grandson) and his daughter, Chiara, who is representing the 5th generation. The grapes are hand harvested and the wine making is very protective in order to retain the freshness and delicacy of fruit.

AUSTRIA

Absolutely stunning white wines are produced in Austria from its signature grape variety Gruner Veltliner. This charming grape produces refreshing, tangy wines with aromas of green fruits and white pepper. Riesling grown here is much fuller bodied than the German wines due to the warmer climate. Much of the hype surrounding Gruner Veltliner comes from a series of blind tastings in which Austria's leading Gruner Veltliners were pitched against top Chardonnays from around the world, including some white Burgundies. Remarkably, the panel of judges voted the Austrian wines into seven of the top 10 places. So, why not go ahead and surprise your guests with something different?

GERMANY

There is a secret world of fine wine in Germany. Riesling is famous here, growing perfectly on the steep south-facing hillsides around the River Mosel and River Rhine. The grape has a lovely refreshing acidity and during the long, dry autumns is able to develop intense concentrated fruit flavours and build up high levels of sugar. Whilst many Rieslings have some sweetness, there are dry ones usually signified by the term "Trocken" on the label. Riesling is easily affected by noble rot, which can create very golden, honeyed, sweet wines called "Beerenauslese" and "Trockenbeerenauslese". Because of the high levels of sugar and acidity in German Rieslings, these wines age fantastically, developing honeyed, nutty and sometimes even petrol aromas.

PORTUGAL

Portugal is mostly famous for the fortified wine Port, but are increasingly becoming known for their dry red wines made from their indigenous grape variety Touriga Nacional. Tawny ports, named after their tawny colour, are aged in barrels for a very long time to give aromas of walnuts, coffee and caramel. Vintage ports are amongst the longest-lived wines and have more dark fruit and spice aromas. These often require decanting to remove the sediment.

SPAIN

Spain has a long wine history and is the 3rd largest producer in the world. The finest wines are produced in Rioja, Ribera del Duero and Priorat. Probably the most well-known is Rioja, producing oaky reds from the Tempranillo grape. Priorat is a new fashionable region, growing the grape Garnacha (Grenache) to create dark, alcoholic, concentrated wines and a wine from here known as L'Ermite now ranks amongst one of the best Spanish wines. Ribera del Duero uses Tempranillo and is home to the famous producers called Pingus and Vega Sicilia.

UNITED STATES

Although wine is made in all the 50 states, 90% of production is in sunny California. Here there has been a surge in boutique wineries, which now has some of the World's greatest Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Zinfandel (called Primitivo in Italy), Pinot Noir and Chardonnay. This was shown in 1976 when a very famous blind tasting of Californian wines beat the best French wines. The exercise was repeated in London in 2006, with the Californians again beating the French.

ARGENTINA

Argentina is known mostly for the smooth red grape called Malbec, grown widely in the Mendoza region but originating from Cahors in the South of France. Torrontes is Argentina's signature white grape and has lovely fragrant grapey and floral aromas. The majority of the vineyards are found on the slopes of the Andes between 600 and 1500 meters of altitude, with warm sunny days, cool nights and irrigation from the mountains. This large range in temperature, draws out an interesting range of aromas and flavours in the grapes.

CHILE

Chile is South America's largest wine exporter, growing a range of worldwide known grape varieties including Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot, Chardonnay and Sauvignon Blanc. The country is long and thin, placed between the Andes Mountains irrigating the vines and the cold Pacific Ocean cooling the vineyards down. Due to the near perfect growing conditions and inexpensive land, they are producing very good value wines here.

AU BON CLIMAT - SANTA BARBARA

Au Bon Climat (which means "a well-exposed vineyard") produces internationally acclaimed Chardonnay and Pinot Noir in California's Santa Barbara County. Jim Clendenen, the eccentric maverick behind these wines, was one of the first who recognised the potential of the cooler climate in the South of California and has since become a trendsetter for Californian wines. They don't conform to the generally expected style of big powerful wines that dominate the region, instead take more inspiration from Burgundy and producing more elegant wines.

DIAMOND CREEK - NAPA VALLEY

The story of this top estate started when Al Brounstein took a wine appreciation class at UCLA and fell in love with Bordeaux and Burgundy. A few years later in 1968, he paid around $100k for 80 acres on Diamond Mountain from a seller who luckily had failed in trying to build a nine-hole golf course. He smuggled vine cuttings from Bordeaux via Mexico so he wouldn't have to put them through the long and expensive quarantine process and so, Diamond Creek was born. Today this estate produces some of the top Cabernets in Napa.

NEWTON VINEYARDS - NAPA VALLEY

This Napa Valley based winery is owned by Hua and Peter Newton who originally worked at the Sterling Vineyard. Having their own vineyard offered them the opportunity to establish their own winemaking philosophy of sustainability, attention to detail and the restriction in the use of synthetic pesticides and fertilizers. Their top wine, the iconic red Bordeaux blend, "The Puzzle" is so named due to its complexity, using only the best grapes selected from all corners of the vineyard.

RIDGE VINEYARD - SANTA CRUZ MOUNTAIN

Ridge shot to fame after stunning the world with its triumph in the 1976 Judgement of Paris blind tasting against nine other French and Californian wines. At the 30th anniversary in 2006, the same red wines were re-tasted and Ridge Monte Bello ranked 1st place. Monte Bello, the flagship wine, is made from Bordeaux grape varieties grown in 19th century vineyards. The winemaker is dedicated to 'old world' winemaking methods, minimum intervention and growing the most concentrated and flavoursome grapes. The estate also specialises in top quality Zinfandel and elegant Chardonnay.

SHAFER VINEYARDS - NAPA VALLEY

Shafer Vineyards started when John Shafer had a mid-life crisis and left a 23-year publishing career to pursue his dream of winemaking. They very quickly established themselves as a top producer in Napa Valley. They are most noted for their Hillside Select, a 100% Cabernet Sauvignon wine with intense ripe black fruit and a silky texture. It's nearly impossible to buy unless you are on the mailing list. In the words of Robert Parker, "One of the world's, as well as Napa's, most profound Cabernet Sauvignons".

ALTOS LAS HORMIGAS - MENDOZA

In 1995 the famous Tuscan winemaker Alberto Antonino visited the burgeoning wine areas of South America and he established Altos Las Hormigas. Instead of planting Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot as others were doing, he planted Malbec. The wines have won many prestigious awards including gold in the International Wine Challenge and have featured in Wine Spectators top 100 wines on numerous occasions.

ACHAVAL FERRER - MENDOZA

Achaval Ferrer is a small boutique winery that produce some of the finest wines in the whole of Argentina. It was only founded in 1998, by a group of friends coming together with one aim in mind – to create world class wines. They achieved just that and have received very high points in Robert Parker's Wine Spectator and in 2012 the Finca Bella Vista was listed as one of the 10 best in the world – an impressive feat for an Argentinian wine.

It is impossible to talk about Argentinian wine for more than a few minutes without someone mentioning the Catena family. This family have been a key player in putting Mendoza and the grape Malbec on the wine map. With their wines made from Malbec, they grow grapes at different altitudes and blend together, to give a wider array of aromas and flavours.

This is a very dynamic and inspiring winemaker who in 2009 set up his own project that is regarded as one of Argentina's greatest producers. He is the son of legendary Jorge Riccitelli who was chief winemaker at Norton for many years. After travelling extensively and making wine at several top estates in Argentina, he finally settled in Las Compuertas in Lujan de Cuyo to focus on fresh and vibrant top-quality Malbec.

CHILE

ERRAZURIZ

Errazurriz are recognised as one of the best Chilean producers. They were established by Don Maximiano in 1870 in the Aconcagua Valley. He recognised the potential of the land, with its hot dry summers and cooling Pacific Ocean breezes which together are ideal for growing grapes. Don Maximiano once said "From the best land, the best wine" and this is definitely the philosophy of Errazurriz. They grow many different grape varieties from the popular Sauvignon Blanc to Carménère, a nearly long-lost Bordeaux grape that has now found its home in Chile.

New Zealand
Australia
South Africa

NEW ZEALAND

Only just scraping into the top 30 wine countries, New Zealand is very small player in the world of wine. The first vines were planted in Marlborough in only 1973, however since then has impressively built up a well-respected reputation for its pungent style of Sauvignon Blanc. Due to the high levels of sunshine, these are much fruitier and tropical than its French counterparts Sancerre and Pouilly-Fumé. Being on the same latitude as Burgundy, Pinot Noir grows fantastically well here, particularly in Central Otago.

AUSTRALIA

Australia is a diverse country, containing many different climates and producing all styles of wine, with vineyards mostly located in the cooler Southern parts. Their export market has been very successful, driven mostly by competitive pricing, consistent quality and engaging branding and marketing. Shiraz (or Syrah) grows very well in Barossa Valley, creating a very fruit-forward style compared to wines of Northern Rhône. Cabernet Sauvignon grown amazingly well in Coonawarra. In terms of white wines, Chardonnay is grown widely all over in in lots of different styles from oaked to un-oaked. Semillon is popular in Hunter Valley and Clare and Eden Valley are best for Riesling.

SOUTH AFRICA

South Africa has been making wine for 350 years and is seen as the oldest of the New World wine countries. The 'Bordeaux-Blend' of Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot is popular in Stellenbosch. Pinotage is South Africa's speciality and was formed by crossing the grape Pinot Noir and Cinsaut. These wines have a full body and spicy red berry fruits that can age rather interestingly. Chenin Blanc (also known locally as Steen) is the most widely grown white grape, made in a variety of styles and with some more premium producers using barrel ageing to give extra body and toastiness.

NEW ZEALAND

CLOUDY BAY - MARLBOROUGH

One of the most world-recognised New Zealand wines brand, made famous by its Sauvignon Blanc from Marlborough. Tropical aromas, a zesty acidity and long flavour some finish - it definitely lives up to its reputation. Slightly different, "Te Koko" has being aged in oak barrels for a short time to give a slight smoky note. Pinot Noir also achieves great perfection when grown in New Zealand and Cloudy Bay have surpassed themselves with their example.

FELTON ROAD - CENTRAL OTAGO

The estate was bought by Nigel Greening, a self-described Pinot Noir "addict" from England in 2000 and is now on the most legendary wineries in New Zealand. The vineyards have been run biodynamically and organically since then, with minimal intervention winemaking. The result is they produce a rare beast - one of the best examples of Pinot Noir outside of Burgundy, with elegance, complexity and exceptional depth of fruit.

CULLEN WINES - MARGARET RIVER

Winemaker and owner Vanya Cullen is a strong believer in biodynamic viticulture and feels it is her responsibility to work close to nature. Her 28-hectare top quality estate is located in Margaret River in Western Australia where she grows Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Chardonnay. The grapes are hand harvested and she is a strong advocate for minimal intervention in the wine making, something that has given her wines much character and complexity.

Parker estate in Coonawarra produces some of the finest Cabernet Sauvignons in Australia on the famous Terra Rossa soil. The estate has nothing to do with the leading wine critic Robert Parker although he rates wines here very highly. The Terra Rossa First Growth is made of the oldest vines in the vineyard giving it slightly more concentration and complexity. The Terra Rossa Cabernet Sauvignon label shows equal quality of fruit and oak integration yet with less ageing potential and depth.

Other Spirits

For many of our clients, spirits are just as important a consideration as wine and Champagne.

This year, we have expanded our Spirits & Liquors section to reflect this demand for an ever-increasing range of premium spirits, as well as including a Sake section for the first time. Naturally, if there are any specific requirements that do not feature on this list, just let us know and we will be happy to source them for you.

TEQUILA

DON JULIO

Named after its founder Don Julio González who started distilling tequila in 1942 at the age of 17, Don Julio is considered the world's first luxury tequila. Demand for quality tequila has soared in the past few years, and indeed it has become one of our bestselling spirits. With a range of different styles available, it is Don Julio's 1942, with its distinctive bottle shape, that is producer's flagship cuvée. It is matured for 30 months in American oak before bottling.

PATRÓN

John Paul DeJoria and Martin Crowley established Patrón in 1989 with the sole mission of producing the best tequilas in the world. 30 years later and the Patrón brand is indeed synonymous with excellence. Part of this success has been down to the use of 100% agave, which was very rare in tequila production at the time. There are styles to suit all palates, with the Gran Patrón Burdeos Añejo sitting proudly at the top of the tree; an absolute must have for any tequila aficionado.

SAKE

INTRODUCTION TO SAKE

Over the past few years we have seen an increasing trend towards drinking sake on board; so much so that we have decided to add a sake section to this year's Wine & Spirits List.

Despite often being referred to as "rice wine", sake is in fact much closer to a beer in terms of how it is produced. Japan has been at the epicentre of the world's sake production for over 3 500 years, so it stands to reason that this is where the highest quality examples come from today.

Unlike wine, sake is all about purity – not complexity. Elegance is judged by the shortness and cleanness of the finish. In terms of flavour characteristics, sake often exhibits a more savoury, umami character, with more sweetness and less acidity than most wines. Alcohol levels are generally between 15-18 %.

To make sake, each grain of rice is polished down to its starchy core, removing any impurities. The degree of polishing will determine the style of the finished product. The highest degree of polishing will produce the purest, most elegant sakes.

STYLES OF SAKE

Sake can be divided into two initial categories: Junmai and Non-Junmai. Non-Junmai sakes have distilled alcohol added to them at the end of fermentation, whereas Junmai have not had anything added (Junmai means "pure rice"). Each of these are then divided according to the degree of rice polishing as below.

JUNMAI	Junmai Daiginjo	Rice is polished down to at least 50% of its original size
	Junmai Ginjo	Polished to at least 60%
	Junmai	Polished to at least 61%
NON-JUNMAI	Daiginjo	Polished to at least 50%
	Ginjo	Polished to at least 60%
	Honjozo	Polished to between 62 and 70%

SAKE

SERVING SAKE

Temperature is an important factor in the service of sake, with different styles served anywhere from 0-55°C. A good way to warm sake is by submerging the bottle in an ice bucket of recently boiled water (while taking care not to overheat it). Sake is traditionally served in specially made small cups, however if these are not available wine glasses are also acceptable.

SUGGESTED SERVICE TEMPERATURES:

Warm (35-45°C)	Futsushu
Room temperature (18-20°C)	Honjozo
Lightly chilled (10-12°C)	Junmai
Well chilled (6-8°C)	Junmai Daiginjo/Junmai Ginjo/Daiginjo and all Ginjo styles

Tesseron makes some of the oldest and finest Cognacs on the market. Indeed, the range is composed entirely of 'XO' bottles. The Tesseron's also own the famous Bordeaux Châteaux Pontet Canet and Lafon Rochet. Blends are left to mature for many years in the producer's 13th century cellars. There is impressive complexity even at the lower end of the range, but the Trésor is truly exceptional and the Extreme moves into the realm of the sublime, sitting at the very top of the tree and among the world's finest Cognacs.

RUM - OUR BESTSELLERS

RON ZACAPA

Hailing from the highlands of Guatemala, Zacapa has established itself as one of the leading luxury brands in the world of rum. Lower temperatures at this higher altitude slow the ageing process, while the thinner air helps to intensify the infusion of flavours from the barrels. Zacapa Royal is the brand's flagship rum, which is triple aged in three different barrel types over a 30-year period. The result is an impressively full-bodied rum that is best served on its own.

DIPLOMÁTICO

In the foothills of the Andes mountains lies Venezuela's Diplomático distillery. Sugar cane molasses is used to produce its lighter styles while sugar cane honeys add an extra dimension of complexity to the top end of the range. Sitting at the top of the tree is Diplomático Ambassador, developing complex flavours over the course of a 14-year maturation prior to bottling.

LA FAVORITE

La Favorite distillery matures aged rums in accordance with Martinique tradition – using old oak casks that have already given up their tannins from the previous storage of whisky or cognac. It is in these carefully selected barrels that the unique flavours of Cuvée Flibuste gradually develop over a period of 25 years.

VODKA - OUR BESTSELLERS

GREY GOOSE

A perennial favourite, Grey Goose is a premium French vodka that uses only two ingredients from field to bottle: the highest-grade wheat and pristine limestone-filtered spring water. This result is a signature smoothness, combined with a clear, fresh and elegantly aromatic taste.

Grey Goose

BELUGA

There is a reason Beluga Noble vodka is Russia's number one selling premium vodka. Its superb quality and clean taste comes from its ingredients of malt grain and pure Siberian water. After distillation it is capped with an Italian cork and wax sealed, and a small Beluga fish is hand-fitted to each bottle. Beluga Gold Line is one of the world's most luxurious vodkas. Made only in limited editions with each bottle individually numbered, its prolonged production period results in an exquisitely balanced, smooth taste.

BELVEDERE

Considered as the world's first super-premium vodka, Belvedere is a Polish vodka crafted using 100% Dankowskie rye and local pure water. It is then distilled with the optimum four distillations to suit this grain. On the nose there is a faint note of vanilla with soft cream; the palate is full and round with a medium body, while the finish is long, with notes of clotted cream and almonds.

STOLICHNAYA

Stolichnaya may well be Russia's oldest distillery, believed to date back to the early 20th century. Producing a range of vodkas, including flavoured vodkas, the Elit is our bestselling bottle from their range and is widely regarded as one of the world's finest vodkas. As with all the best vodkas, it is extremely clean and neutral on the nose and a hint of toasted grain. The vodka is characterised by its long, soft, spicy finish.

GIN - OUR BESTSELLERS

MISTRAL

Produced from a 100-year-old distillery in Provence, this premium rosé gin is one of our personal favourites. Carefully selected local botanicals are distilled separately from the traditional juniper-based botanicals which are then blended together. This helps create Mistral's unique flavour and its delicate aromas of mint, pink grapefruit and thyme. Highly recommended!

TANQUERAY

Since 1830, Tanqueray London Dry Gin has been made according to the same classic, timeless recipe. Its iconic bottle shape is inspired by a three-part cocktail shaker made famous during Prohibition's classic cocktail movement in the "Roaring 1920s". Tanqueray's No. Ten Batch is a super-premium gin distilled in small batches with fresh citrus fruits, camomile flowers and other hand-selected botanicals.

THE IDEAL WINE LIST

For some reason many wine lists on yachts are fairly similar to one another.

I doubt there are many stewards, stewardesses or captains who have never heard of Domaine Ott, Baron de L, Tignanello or Louis Latour.

These are all great producers but there is a plenty more out there to choose from and an experienced charter guest might be pretty bored of finding similar selections on offer time after time. Creating an individual and interesting wine list is an opportunity to show your commitment and expertise to your clients.

Yacht Cru Wine Guide

We understand how important it is as a crew member to know about the wines you are serving. This is why we have put together a free guide especially for you, including instructive videos and articles about service, wine regions and food pairing. As well as physical copies, you can consult the wine guide online at: www.theyachtcruwineguide.com

THE ESSENTIALS

A wine list for the yachting industry should include classic regions and producers with historic reputations. The top First Growths from Bordeaux are important, as well as certain Grand Crus and Premieres Crus from Burgundy. However, you should include other regions and countries, or more small interesting producers with a story to tell. It can be a pleasant surprise for a guest to discover a list of carefully selected wines. Small biodynamic or organic producers who have an uncompromised vision for quality and authenticity can be a nice addition. Also, unknown wines that have received high scores from highly acclaimed wine critic Robert Parker or Wine Spectator are good to include. Think about what's trendy in the world of wine when creating a wine list. The consumption of rosé is increasing every year, so we would recommend offering a selection of different styles, for example both non-oaked and oaked versions. We know Provence rosé is popular, but you could also offer rosé from different wine regions.

Ensure you have a selection of different Champagne styles including Brut Non-Vintage, Rosé and Prestige Cuvees such as Dom Perignon, Cristal and Krug. The well-known names of Moët et Chandon and Veuve Clicquot are important, but it can also be interesting and different to have some of the smaller producers such as Deutz and Ruinart. Why not even have some large format bottles such as Magnums or Jeraboams for those special occasions?

Robert Parker and Wine Spectator

Robert Mr. Parker Jr. is a leading U.S. wine critic with a highly international influence. He is rating wines on a 100-point scale coupled with descriptive tasting notes which is published monthly in his newsletter "The Wine Advocate". Despite occasional controversy surrounding his reviews and scores, he continues to be by far the most influential fine wine critic in the world today. Many Americans will make their choice of wine depending on his scores and wine merchants around the world will adjust prices accordingly. The Wine Spectator is an American wine magazine with same sort of point scale and although not as powerful as Mr. Parker their points do affect sales.

Bordeaux and Burgundy

In 1855, the government requested a classification system for France's best Bordeaux wines which were to be on display in the world exhibition in Paris. Brokers from the wine industry ranked the wines according trading price at the time, which at that time was directly related to quality. The result was the Bordeaux Wine Official Classification of 1855. The wines were classified into 5 different categories, from first to fifth growth (first growth being the best). Famous names such as Château Lafite and Château Latour are examples of first growths. The classification system in Burgundy is different from the one in Bordeaux; the classification does not belong to the producer but is a geographical rating. In other words, there are many producers making wine from any given Premiere or Grand Cru (Grand cru being the top and most expensive).

WINE MENU

The main objective of a wine menu is to be inviting, clear and informative! There are many ways of organising a list but I would recommend dividing the list into five headings in the following order: sparkling, white wines, Rosé wines, red wines and sweet wines. If you have a slightly longer list you could group your wines under subheadings for each country they are from e.g. French wines, Italian wines. In terms of the details of the wine, it is very important to state the wine name, the vintage, the producer and the area it is from. If you simply state Brunello di Montalcino with no producer name, then this tells your guest you have taken no care in the selection of wines. Additional information that can help are listing the grape varieties and even writing short tasting notes.

STORAGE AND STOCK

When it comes to yachts, we understand that storage is an issue and it is sometimes not possible to store a lot of wine. Given the short amount of space, your selection of wines is crucial and you should ensure you do not stock too much of the same wine and that all the wine you stock is ready for drinking now. Left over bottles from past owners and charter guests, can create a vast selection of wines and take up your valuable storage space. Having only one or two bottles of wine can make it difficult to work with and use. If you come across this problem then you could organise a wine tasting dinner. You could work with the chef to design a menu of smaller dishes along with a matching wine for each course. Food and wine matching guidelines can be found in this booklet. Another idea to get rid of only a few bottles of wine is to have a pre-dinner wine tasting.

FOOD AND PAIRING

Food and wine pairing is something to be considered when creating a wine list. If the list is for a charter boat then it can be difficult to foresee food preferences and the wine list should be quite classic with many different options. However, if you know that the guests or owners enjoys Asian inspired food, then it would be a good idea to have wine options that complement this. Spicy and aromatic food matches well with off-dry fruity wines such as Gewürztraminer and Pinot Gris from Alsace.

Often dessert wine is a category that gets omitted from a yacht wine list which is a shame as it can offer a lot of pleasure. With many dinners, greater attention is paid to the starter and main course and the wine for dessert tends to be whatever is left over from the main course. If you think about it, a lemon cake and full-bodied red is far from an enjoyable combination. Popular dessert wines include Sauternes from Bordeaux and Tokaji from Hungary which are both intensely sweet yet fresh and elegant. Moscato d'Asti is a great sparkling dessert wine which can be a fabulous match with fruit desserts.

FOOD AND WINE PAIRING

Food and wine pairing can enhance the gastronomic experience of a meal, be it a lunch on the beach or an exclusive dinner on the deck. The most important factor to remember when pairing wine and food is the personal preference of your guest.

Most people prefer a powerful red wine with steak and a white wine with salmon, but there is nothing wrong with drinking a red Barolo with salmon if that is what you enjoy. Besides personal preference, there are a number of guidelines to follow to find the best pairings and avoid some bad matches.

STAY LOCAL

Many wines, especially in the Old World, have evolved over the years to suit the local cuisine. If in doubt about what wine to pair with a food, then a local wine can be a good place to start. For example, a lot of Italian food is tomato based and the acidity of the tomatoes matches well with the high acidity of Italian wines. Another example is Goats cheese and Sauvignon Blanc, Sancerre and Pouilly-Fumé. There is a famous Goats cheese called Crottin de Chavignol made just outside the village of Sancerre and the aromatic flavours of each pair beautifully together. Other examples include Boeuf Bourguignon and red Burgundy, oysters and Muscadet and truffles and Barolo.

WEIGHT

Weight is a very important factor to take into consideration and you should try to match the weight of your wine with the weight of your food. For example, a light green salad would pair well with a bodied wine such as a Pinot Grigio or Sauvignon Blanc. The goal with food and wine pairing is to have the wine and food to co-exist and be able to express its character without being dominated by the other. If one were to serve a full-bodied buttery Chardonnay with light green salad, the wine would be overpowering and you wouldn't be able to taste the salad. Likewise, if you had a weighty dish such as a mushroom risotto, this would overpower a light-bodied wine and then a full bodied Chardonnay would come in handy.

FLAVOUR INTENSITY

The amount of flavour in a dish is another important aspect for the same reasons as above. A full flavoured wine will overpower a very mild dish and vice versa. The reason why a Barossa Shiraz is a great match for BBQ meat is that both the wine and food are full flavoured and spicy. On the other hand, a lightly flavoured red wine like Beaujolais would not be able to compete with the intense BBQ flavours. A classic rule that also would fit under this heading and generally works well is that white meat goes with white wine (or light red) and red meat goes with red wine.

ACIDITY

If you have a dish with a lot of acid such as pasta with a tomato sauce or a salad with vinaigrette dressing, then you need to ensure your wine has equal or higher acidity. Gambas with a lime dressing for example would go well with a crisp wine such as Chablis, Sauvignon Blanc, Chenin Blanc or Riesling. The acid in the food will balance the wine and make it taste fruitier and less acidic. If you paired a high acid dish with a low acid wine, the wine would taste very neutral and almost watery.

SWEETNESS

Have you ever eaten a sweet lemon tart with the red wine left over from your main course? I have tried this combination and it is quite horrible! Sweet foods need sweet wine, otherwise the wine will taste sour and the dessert will not show its full potential. The wine should be at least as sweet if not sweeter than the dessert.

Great combinations for example are, chocolate desserts and red Port (or the French version Banyuls and Maury). Fruit desserts benefit from a fruitier white wine such as Muscats - Muscat de Beaune de Venise is a nice fresh suggestion.

FAT

Although I mentioned that weighty food should have full bodied wines, fatty foods can be different. Sometimes it is better to have a contrasting wine to create a balance. Smoked salmon for example, is heavy and fairly fatty and yet a perfect combination is light to medium Champagne or Chablis. The acidity in the wine will cut through the fat in the fish and make the meal seem lighter and more refreshing.

RED WINE AND FISH

Generally speaking you shouldn't serve red wine with fish and white wine is normally a better option, however there are a couple of exceptions. Red wines contain tannins, which in combination with some fish can create an unpleasant metallic and bitter taste in your mouth. However some fish which are slightly heavier and meatier than others such as Tuna and Monkfish, can pair well with light bodied and low tannin wines such as Beaujolais or red Sancerre.

HOT SPICE

Spicy foods can be the trickiest to match with wine but sensitivity for chilli heat varies greatly from one person to the next so this guideline is very dependent on personal preference. For me the best matches are off-dry to medium sweet white wines from Alsace (Pinot Gris and Gewürztraminer). The sweetness in the wine has a softening effect on the spice. Red wines with high tannins should be avoided with spice, since this can make the heat even more intense and longer lasting.

PAIRING WINE WITH PEOPLE

Perhaps this is the most important aspect, wine is made for our enjoyment and whoever is drinking the wine is of course the ultimate judge of whether a match is good or bad. When I started my wine drinking career in my late teens, I thought sweet Asti Spumante was a great match with pasta and ketchup, which I must say I do not think any longer! Another example came from a client of mine whom had served Petrus (a legendary super expensive Bordeaux wine) with Hamburgers to her charter guests and that is a match I would not say no to!

WINE TRAINING

There are several wine courses available that are both educative and entertaining but if you wish to have records of your knowledge in wine and have an internationally recognized qualification, the WSET® courses is the only option.

The Wine and Spirit Education Trust (WSET®) was founded in the UK in 1969 to provide high quality education and training in wines and spirits. Since then, WSET® has grown into the foremost international body in the field of wines and spirits education, with a suite of sought-after qualifications. Although based in London, there are over 600 centers in 60 countries that provide the qualifications and Riviera Wine was the first one on the Riviera to become an Approved Program Provider.

WSET® LEVEL 2 - AWARD IN WINES

The Level 2 qualification is intended for those aspiring to a Chief Steward(ess) position, or indeed anyone who wishes to deepen their knowledge of wine and other alcoholic beverages. It is an intense course lasting three days. The syllabus includes topics such as the key wine-producing areas of the world, grape varieties, label terminology, professional tasting of a large selection of international quality wines and food and wine matching.

WSET® LEVEL 3 - AWARD IN WINES

This is an in depth 5-day wine course which gives comprehensive coverage of all main wines and spirits. The course has an increased focus on tasting technique and on the application of the knowledge gained. We will taste around 100 wines from around the world and cover the wine regions in greater depth than for the Intermediate Certificate. Viticulture and vinification are also subjects dealt with in more depth. Candidates are advised to hold the WSET® Level 2 before studying for the WSET® Level 3.

STORAGE

Wine is a fragile and delicate drink and if planning to keep it longer than a few months some consideration in terms of storage is recommended. This doesn't need to be an expensive wine fridge or a full temperature controlled dark wine cellar, but it does require some thought.

The greatest enemies of wine are heat and light. This is why many wine bottles are made of dark glass so as to minimize U.V. exposure. Heavier red wines are less sensitive to heat and light than lighter whites and rosé wines. The ideal storage temperature of a wine is between 10-15°C and in a constant manner. Minor changes due to different seasons are of less importance than regular changes. If not, the wine will mature faster and lose some of its complexity and finesse. A wine should also be stored away from vibrations, which is almost impossible on a yacht but perhaps can one avoid putting it near the engine room at least.

Wine bottles should always be stored on the side so the cork is in contact with the wine. If leaving a bottle standing up for too long the cork will harden and fail leading to oxidation of the wine. For yachts, the best solution to make sure the quality of the wine is intact is to either invest in wine fridges or aiming to buy ready to drink vintages and to try to plan what is needed for the season as much as possible.
