My dog constantly barks & lunges at bicyclists.
How can I get him to change this behavior?

Cathy B. (Certified Dog Trainer)

Commented on June 28, 2017

It's natural for dogs to want to run after an object that's moving at high speeds away from them; this is the "chase" part of the predatory sequence. It is important to redirect the urge to chase; the consequences of your dog continuing this behavior can be serious, especially if he were ever to get off his leash. While most dogs would stop as soon as they caught up to the runner or cyclist, there are dogs who would nip or who may inflict major harm with deeper bites or a full-on takedown. Keep in mind, too, that the cyclist or runner being chased doesn't know if your dog is friendly or threatening, and may respond by kicking or hurting your dog in self-defense. Putting an end to chase behavior keeps your dog and the people he's sharing the road with safe.
