

Dealing with Challenging Clients: Why Don't They Just Get Over It?

An Experiential Workshop for Implementing Strategies for Trauma Awareness and Resilience (STAR)

June 15th & 16th, 2020
9:00am – 4:30pm

Monaco Training Center
Amherst NY

Why is this program different than other trauma trainings?

As practitioners or helping professionals, we find ourselves faced with clients who present as annoying, passive, aggressive, stubborn, refusing to communicate fairly, stuck in the past, and unwilling to move forward. This behavior affects the communication and learning process and limits our clients' ability to benefit from the services we provide. Familiarity with typical trauma reactions will allow conflict resolvers and other professionals to shift their thinking and take a different approach.

Many trainings give you the textbook information about trauma. STAR content gives you a powerful experience and insight into trauma effects, how your clients are affected every day of their lives, and why they can't just "get over it" and move on. This experiential workshop will equip you to recognize clients' trauma and help them break free and move forward.

Who should attend?

Legal professionals, mediators and restorative justice professionals, social workers, wraparound services staff, case planners, mentors, parent advocates, school counselors, clergy, front-line workers, medical staff, emergency and disaster first responders, and others working with trauma survivors.

Overview

Limited to 25 people. This two-day training brings together theory and practices from neurobiology, conflict transformation, human security, spirituality, and restorative justice to address the needs of trauma-impacted individuals and communities. It provides core concepts and skills from the Level 1 five-day Strategies for Trauma Awareness and Resilience (STAR) program. STAR was developed in 2001 in response to the events of September 11th.

Trauma affects individuals, families, and communities and can fuel continuing cycles of conflict and harm. This training pulls together a wide variety of professionals and paraprofessionals into an experiential trauma training that goes right to the core and helps you connect on a deeper level with other participants and your clients. It will challenge your assumptions about why some trauma survivors seem stuck and not be able to “just get over it” and move on. After completion of this program, you will reach a level of providing trauma-informed care beyond what you were previously able to give to your clients.

What will I learn?

Through experiential exercises and the Circle Process, you will:

- Understand how to recognize both subtle and obvious trauma symptoms;
- Understand how trauma affects the communication and learning process limiting clients' ability to benefit from services provided;
- Examine the links between unhealed trauma, and cycles of victim-hood and violence;
- Understand why trauma survivors may appear stuck or unable to move forward, and how this manifests itself in clients in the legal and human service system;
- Learn how to shift your thinking and effectively engage trauma survivors through a new approach (Strategies for Trauma Awareness and Resilience);
- Identify ways to incorporate the STAR trauma healing model into your work;
- Examine and practice ways to build resilience and accompany individuals on a trauma healing journey, breaking cycles of violence;
- View clients through a trauma-informed lens in both the human service system and the legal system;
- Understand Restorative Justice as a response to trauma—reconciling victims and offenders;
- Participate in a Circle Process that allows you to experience safety and vulnerability with other participants as we expect our clients to do with us all the time;
- Understand Emotional First Aid and learn how to help a client discharge trauma safely from their body;
- Enhance your self-care skills through a deeper understanding of vicarious traumatization and practicing self-care tools.
