Course Description

Skill level – Beginner, Intermediate, Advanced

This workshop is for therapists who have completed an EMDRIA approved EMDR basic-training. When therapists complete training in the 8 phase EMDR protocol, they sometimes find it challenging to integrate EMDR therapy into their current work with challenging and complex trauma clients. By the same token, clinicians with a primary focus in EMDR are often looking for ways to deliver the EMDR protocol in more developmentally sensitive ways which feel safer to the traumatized client. We will review the therapeutic power of the arts and identify techniques and tools that will maximize the healing of clients through integration of the two approaches.

Why Creative Arts?

Afraid of using Art materials?

This workshop will offer a foundation of knowledge on how the power of the arts and EMDR can be effectively integrated with children, adolescents, and adults. EMDR Therapists are looking for ways to deliver EMDR therapy in a developmentally sensitive way that feels safer to the client with complex symptoms. Expressive arts can be used to support client resources and skills through the 8 phases of EMDR to increase success treating complex trauma.

TRAUMA INSTITUTE &
CHILD TRAUMA INSTITUTE

Objectives:

- 1 Explain why integrating art experience within the AIP model and eight phases can help increase client readiness for phase 4 processing
- 2 Identify how to help clients increase affect tolerance and a state of calm for processing using art materials such as clay, pastels, drawing, and sand
- 3 Practice how to use art materials with scripts to help client's kinesthetically absorb psychoeducation about trauma and behavior change techniques
- 4 Practice using art materials to enhance resource development
- 5 Identify how creative approaches can address mentalization skills to increase connection with adaptive information when processing attachment wounds
- 6 Practice an art-based version of Fraser's table to learn about different parts of self
- 7 Explain three approaches for integrating art experience in Phase 4 to help process trauma, grief and loss
- 8 Differentiate dissociative symptoms, dissociative disorders and ego states
- 9 Practice an art-based approach to learning window of tolerance
- 10 Identify how art has been used to identify attachment styles
