Interoperability in Healthcare: The Promise of Emerging Technologies

One of the most intractable issues at the intersection of law and healthcare has been the interoperability of patient data contained in medtech silos. For decades it has been projected that as many as 1200 patients die each day in U.S. medical centers due to proprietary technologies unwilling to share patient data with providers. Emerging technologies such as blockchain, artificial intelligence and cybercurrency provide patient data interoperability potentials which can disrupt the status quo. This session will explore the legal, technological and healthcare elements related to how this watershed patient care opportunity can be maximized.

Panelists

The Evolving Legal Frontiers of ICOs

While initial token offerings continue their ascent as the most exciting capital fundraising vehicle in the digital currency space, legal issues often seem to be outpacing the ability of investors, regulators, and corporate decision-makers to keep up. This panel of experts will offer an update on current issues and trends, while sharing the best, most informed approaches to navigating the complex dynamics and enormous opportunities represented by cryptographic assets.
