I am a perennial flowering plant whose flowers come in many colors, most commonly orange. Hummingbirds visit my flowers for nectar and help with pollination.

I am an evergreen plant with red flowers that turn into bright red fruit. Many birds, like the California towhee and California thrasher, like to eat my berries.

I get my name because of my very pleasant fragrance. You will often see hummingbirds visit my flowers for their nectar.

As you walk through the Garden, see how many of these bird friendly plants you can find. Each plant has a special sign to help you identify them. Can you find them all?
