St Kitts' Ministry of Tourism has announced that the island will be the first in the Caribbean to feature a Six Senses resort. The premier brand will open a five-star beach resort on the island in 2021 with a set of 70 private pool villas, a luxury spa, and unique facilities blending into the landscape and overlooking the ocean.

The Ministry of Tourism for the Caribbean island of St Kitts has announced that premier resort and spa brand Six Senses will be making its Caribbean and Latin American debut on St Kitts in 2021.

This marks yet another inaugural Caribbean property by a top tier hotel brand on the island following the opening of the Park Hyatt St Kitts Christophe Harbour in November 2017.

The new Six Senses resort will be set on 41 acres of a former sugar plantation in the La Vallee area of St. Kitts with rolling green hills and a long stretch of sandy Caribbean beach. The resort will feature 70 pool villas and The Retreat blending harmoniously into the surrounding tropical vegetation with scenic views of the landscape and the sea.

Range Developments, which was also responsible for the development of Park Hyatt St Kitts Christophe Harbour, will be in charge of the project. The Six Senses development will create around 300 jobs on island during construction, with several hundred more becoming available once the hotel is operational.

St Kitts' Minister of Tourism, International Trade, Industry and Commerce, Lindsay Grant said:

"We sincerely look forward to welcoming the distinguished Six Senses brand to St Kitts. Six Senses only develops resorts in the world's most unique and exquisite destinations, therefore it is a singular testament to the history and natural beauty of the island's landscape to become one of them."

"The Six Senses philosophy with regard to sustainability, wellness and premier service makes it an ideal fit for St Kitts as it complements our own vision and direction for our tourism product as we continue to enhance the variety of accommodations we have to offer to the discerning, experiential traveller."

The Six Senses hospitality brand is committed to sustainability and service. Each of its properties has a distinctive style that makes use of the natural topography. The brand has won recognition for best practice in the areas of environmental performance and preservation of natural and cultural heritage, while enhancing social and economic benefits to local communities in destinations where Six Senses operates.

Six Senses currently operates resorts in the Seychelles, Fiji, France, Oman, the Maldives, Thailand, Singapore, Turkey, Vietnam, Portugal and China.

Located in the Eastern Caribbean, St Kitts is easily accessible for British travellers with twice-weekly British Airways flights from London Gatwick (with a short stop in Antigua).
