The City of Loganville welcomed more than 200 vendors and thousands of people to last year's Autumn Fest, among the city's largest events.

Piedmont Walton announced as headline sponsor for Autumn Fest 2019

Vendor applications being accepted through Oct. 4th

(Sept. 12, 2019) The City of Loganville is proud to announce that Piedmont Walton Hospital has signed on to be the headline sponsor for this year's Autumn Fest.

Scheduled for 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Oct. 19, the annual fall festival is among the biggest events in Loganville.

"Piedmont Walton is proud to sponsor the City of Loganville's Autumn Fest this year," said Larry Ebert, chief executive officer of Piedmont Walton Hospital. "This festival is a great annual event that brings thousands of community members together. We're thankful not only for the opportunity to provide the City of Loganville with high-quality, patient-centered care close to home, but also for community partnerships that bring us all together!"

More than 200 vendors offered a variety of crafts and other wares, promoted their businesses and tempted taste buds at last year's festival — the most in the history of the fall festival. Plans are in full swing for this year's Autumn Fest presented by Piedmont Walton Hospital. Vendor applications will be accepted through Oct. 4th and can be found under the "Festivals" header at www.loganvilleevents.com. Those interested can also fill out an application online or visit City Hall, located at 4303 Lawrenceville Road, Loganville.

Autumn Fest welcomes thousands of residents and guests to the downtown area for food, fun and entertainment. Following the day-long festival will be the city's final outdoor concert of the year, which will kick off at 6 p.m.

"We are excited to welcome Piedmont Walton Hospital as this year's Autumn Fest headline sponsor," said Kristy Daniel, events and marketing director for the City of Loganville. "Our business community offers us such great support that in turn allows us to provide great entertainment locally for free.
