DALZELL TRADING HIRES FORMER GOLDMAN SACHS EXECUTIVE

Dalzell Trading announced this morning that industry executive Lance Meyerowich will serve as the firm's Chief Revenue Officer. Mr. Meyerowich has spent over 20 years on Wall Street, most recently as Managing Director and Head of Delta One Sales at Wells Fargo.

His experience includes 17 years at Goldman Sachs in roles such as Head of Equity Sales on the Cross-Asset Desk and Co-Head of Execution Services for the Synthetic Products Group. He has an MBA in Finance and Management from NYU's Stern School of Business and received a Bachelor of Business Administration from the University of Wisconsin, Madison. He holds Series 9/10, 7, 3, 63 and 55 licenses.

David Dalzell, founder and CEO of Dalzell Trading, stated, "We are thrilled that Lance has joined Dalzell Trading as Chief Revenue Officer. I have known and worked with Lance for years and his knowledge, work ethic and team building are best in class. While trading at BlackRock, I relied daily on Lance and his team at Goldman Sachs to enable our complex trading strategies. He has an unmatched passion for this business and we look forward to Lance coming on board."

Mr. Meyerowich stated, "I am excited to join Dave Dalzell and his team, who are some of Wall Street's best traders and have proven their expertise in both bull and bear markets. The outsourced trading space is growing exponentially, and I look forward to guiding Dalzell Trading to new opportunities."

Dalzell Trading is an outsourced U.S. equity and options trading firm. Dalzell Trading provides professional trading to hedge funds and investment managers, eliminating the fixed expense of in-house traders while empowering managers to focus on portfolio management. The firm combines current trading technology and highly experienced traders, allowing each client to view the firm as their dedicated buy-side trading desk.
