

Sustain Momentum through Relationships

Building relationships is the engine that moves men from the community and pew into discipleship and service. Relationship building is critical in creating, capturing and now sustaining a ministry to men. Sustaining the ministry is about the spiritual growth of men.

Discipleship and Disciplemaking

One? By Patrick Morley. Tom walked up to John and said, "Will you disciple me?" John nearly keeled over. He felt overwhelmingly inadequate. How would you react to this question? Would you have felt a surge of confidence? Or would you have felt a bit uneasy? Like John, you would have been eager to say, "Yes," but not quite sure about what saying, "Yes," would actually mean.

What is a disciple and how do you make one? Read more...

Relationships

Relationships: Key to an Effective Men's Ministry. But you already knew that, didn't you? What you want to know is how to encourage your men to develop relationships. Read more...

Mentoring

Mentoring. The purpose of men's ministry is to move men from the bleachers onto the playing field through building relationships, encouragement, and discipling. The most effective means of discipling men is in a male only environment. This can be in a large group, a small group or a one-on-one relationship. This article focuses on the one-on-one ...

Read more...

Small Groups

Men's Small Groups. It is clear from the Gospels that Jesus spent time mentoring and coaching His disciples. It is also clear the He had especially close relationships with three men: Peter, James and John. These were men who, in turn, were among those who lead the early church.

A Scriptural Basis for Small Groups. What does scripture say about spiritual growth through small groups?

Ministry Ideas

Measuring Progress

Measuring Combat Readiness

Measuring Success