Singapore English aka Singlish is the local lingo. It is a melting pot of words originating from various languages such as English, Mandarin, Hokkien, Cantonese, Malay and Tamil.

Singlish is used universally regardless of race or origin, which reflects multiculturalism at its finest!

Singapore is an island city state in Southeast Asia, smaller than New York City, where 5.6 million people live peacefully in racial harmony.

“This is a slang version of the CAM-ICU Flowsheet created purely in jest by Dr. Chee Hong Loh, of Changi General Hospital in Singapore. It is not meant for actual use at the bedside as it is not validated. In an English speaking country where the population is predominantly Chinese, multiple Asian languages are also spoken, and these are the common languages used for delirium monitoring.”

First presented at 6th SG ANZICS Congress 2019

Sean Loh CH1, Stollings JL2, Ely EW2.
Revised 28 Apr 2019.
1Changi General Hospital, 2Vanderbilt University Medical Center
Contact - seanchloh@gmail.com

Singapore English aka Singlish is the local lingo. It is a melting pot of words originating from various languages such as English, Mandarin, Hokkien, Cantonese, Malay and Tamil.

Singlish is used universally regardless of race or origin, which reflects multiculturalism at its finest!