I like the learning opportunities but we could have more time for in-depth seminars on new technologies and trends

As a research scientist, the most important for me is ability to study state of the art papers and attend conferences. And we get budget for that.

Most important for me are the learning opportunities. There's even an employee education programme for that.

There is no time for self-improvement or learning, only answering emails. Not what I expected.

The tech and management got stuck in the 90s, you basically unlearn stuff at this position

Was here for an internship and I learned a lot from the industry and applied processes.

*The noise, I am long term unable to concentrate and dive deeply into work. Open offices are great for teams that need to work together and depend on it. This should be distinguished.

Open space - easy to be distracted.

too large open space with too many people, noisy at times, it is not possible to concentrate, it is extremely tiring *sometimes is too cold to focus

*I cannot use separate room for phone calls when I need it. People from different areas (floors) come here to call as well, so these rooms are busy.

Noise from others (no noise cancellation in headphones. Hearing doors slam, colleagues talk etc.

The absence of a resting zone, or any place / activities where a person can during working time next to ine thoughts. Comfortable seats / any locations on NAP futbalek / ping pong

No sofa or arm chair to lay my tired body on

There are no places for napping

I want one cool comfy chair to sit at when I'm not working

It's okay with the relax zones, but we should get coach or fatboy.

I am not happy with the relax zones, we should have a little place for taking naps.

Biggest problems

1. Most employees wouldn't recommend you

We measured a low NPS*. It suggests that most employees wouldn't recommend their friend a job in your company.

2. People don't like open-space

Employees often mention a lack of places to focus and relax in solitude because of the shared open-space that tends to be overcrowded.

3. People in IT lack creativity in their work

Many people in the IT department mentioned a desire to get more tasks where they could use their ideas to make something new.

Impact

1. Hindered hiring potential

Low NPS signals higher risk of fluctuation among employees, and that they won't share job opportunities among their friends.

2. Lower productivity

When people can't focus without interruptions, their work suffers.

3. Wasted potential for innovation

People are willing to use their creativity in projects but don't get a chance to do that. It wastes their potential and cause them to leave if it doesn't change.

What can you do about it

How to increase productivity?

1. Add dividers to create privacy in open-space

You can lower the FTE per meter squared, or partly divide your open-space into zones.

2. Add acoustic walls into open-space

The options are acoustic walls, green walls, or at least rearranging the open-space to create more quiet places.

3. Organize more informal meeting events for people

Out of work events build a stronger company culture. People sometimes need a gentle push to go for a beer.

How to increase satisfaction?

1. Add live plants into the workspace

Plants improve the quality of air and mood of your employees.

2. Pick a high-quality coffee supplier

Tea and coffee quality often ranks high in things people like in their workplaces and it's relatively cheap.

3. Organize brainstorming session for the IT department

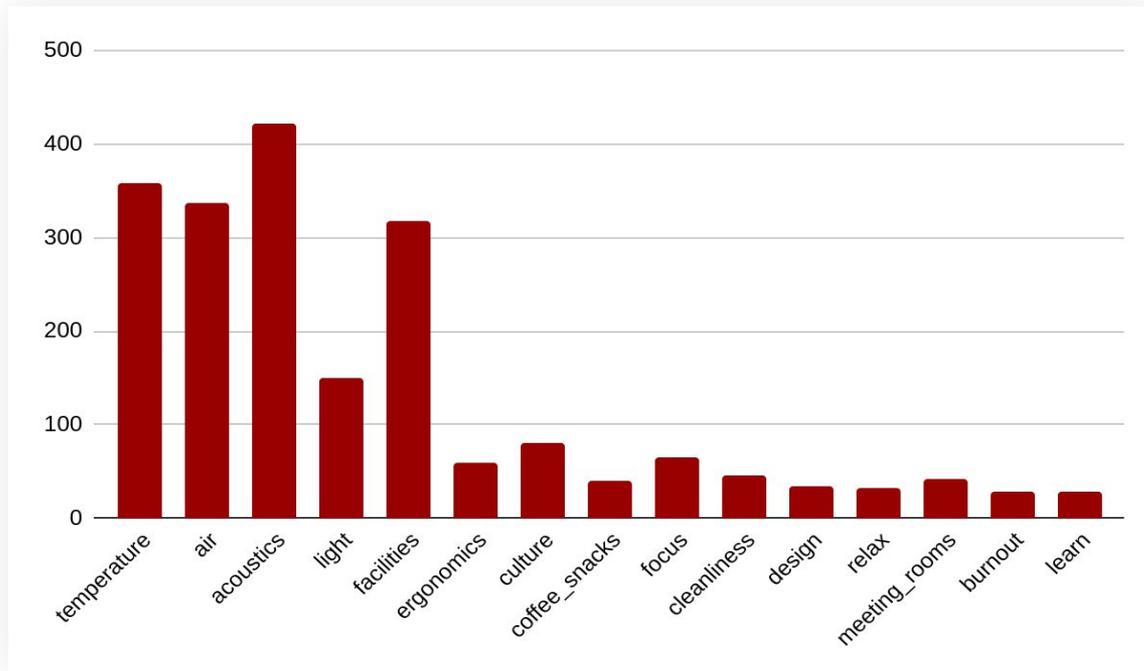

Create opportunities for employees to contribute with their ideas to how your products and services work.
