The Middle East e-commerce market is heating up as competition accelerates and, the market will grow by 16.4 per cent over the next three years, according to a report and a forecast for the e-commerce market in the region is expected to grow to a tune of $48 billion in 2021, up from an estimated $26 billion in 2018.

eCommerce Change

The e-commerce explosion has drastically changed the global retail market. However the upward trend, that has transformed the crescendos of consumer behavior and business simulations in retail, remains untouched in the Middle East and offers immense potential for industry players. Only 15% of the businesses in middle east have an online presence and around 90 percent of the online purchases in the region are imported from other countries. The retail market is on the threshold of digital disruption, with industry players undertaking a essential shift from conventional in-store concept to digital channel with the adoption of digital technologies. This trend gives a major boost to the ecommerce segment with a lot to explore and encash.

Logistics

On time delivery of any product or service is of utmost importance and hence logistics cannot be neglected, and the obvious role for e-commerce companies is especially in the logistics segment and more important is also the last mile delivery. Logistics techniques and technology are developing fast, however are not fully connected with the development of AI and IOT today, eCommerce and logistics should have a coordinated relationship that helps new eCommerce companies to develop well.

Fintech

Across the Globe, many cities are competing to be fintech centers, often with government and regulatory support, in many jurisdictions the development of fintech sandboxes to accelerate innovation. The governments all across have realised and have begun to recognize the potential benefits of new fintech business models in the payments and wealth management market, and let the companies grow the value chain.

The number of fintech start-ups in the MENA region has been increasing drastically. Between 2013 and 2015, the number more than doubled from 46 to 105, and the region is expected to see a total of 250 fintech start-ups launch by the year 2020, according to the Wamda report.

Digital is not a temporary trend: it is a revolution that is happening right now and picking up speed every day. In the Middle East and around the world, digital technologies are disrupting every aspect of business, government and individuals lives.

The Middle East and North Africa (MENA) region is ranked second in the world by number of daily YouTube videos views at more than 310 million. the MENA region is the fastest-growing consumer of videos on Facebook: Middle East Will only further boost the digital adoption rate in the coming years. By 2019, it is estimated that the Middle East and Africa will have the world’s leading cloud traffic growth rate, at 41 percent. Come 2020, projections suggest that there will be around two zettabytes of data in the Middle East.

ReTail Change

We all know retail isn’t dying any time soon – it’s bringing a change. Technology has transformed all industries to change, and retail is no exception. The change is bringing about a new phase of opportunities for smart retailers in every other industry including transportation, manufacturing, communications. When the urbanization happened there was a boom in departmental stores and retails outlets and cars created suburbs and shopping malls. And now we’re facing a new change. Today, retail stores don’t need to be built to materialize a transaction. Because transactions can happen anywhere in a store, in customers’ home, or on their way to work – the retail space now has an all new purpose.

Payments

The consumer payment trends is undergoing a major transformation. The conventional role of payment service providers (PSPs) is becoming redundant. Innovative and digitally sophisticated startups are offering customers new age, value added services that compliment payments execution and shift consumer expectations primarily. The entire financial industry has changed rapidly. Around the world, businesses, banks, and consumers are making a major change in the way they exchange value.

It is a thrilling future for smart bankers who appreciate the power of technology to enhance the client experience, their businesses and bottom line. Personalized mobile services, advanced digital wallet capabilities, social media leverage and the capability to provide segmented client experiences throughout delivery channels are just a few of the advances that is creating the future which is exciting while empowering us to recreate banks that are more relevant than ever before.
