

TROUBLE SLEEPING? LEARN TO MANAGE YOUR SLEEP ISSUES

WHAT ARE SLEEP ISSUES?

Do you have trouble with daytime sleepiness, falling asleep, or staying asleep at night? If so, you're not alone.

Sleep issues affect many of us on a daily basis and can be categorized according to a wide range of symptoms and side effects like not being able to sleep because of racing thoughts, tossing or turning, falling asleep much later than usual, or waking up many times in the night.

FINDING A SOLUTION

Poor sleep can have far reaching effects on overall mental health and wellness. If you're experiencing sleep issues, try some of the below listed strategies.

- Go to bed and wake up at the same time every night (give or take 1 hour or less)
- Reduce caffeine intake (at any time during the day)
- Exercise (or exercise earlier in the day if you're exercising at night)
- Have a nighttime routine (something relaxing, light stretching, warm shower, deep breathing, reading, etc.)
- Don't look at screens for 30-60 min before bed and put a blue light filter on your phone and/or computer
- If you can't fall asleep do a quiet activity out of bed then get back into bed when you're tired
- Don't nap
- If you're going to sleep earlier and earlier and waking up lots in the night, try moving your bedtime an hour or so later, this may help reduce the number of times you wake up in the night or how long you're up for if you do get up

SLEEP CALENDAR

TRACK YOUR CYCLE TO GET A BETTER NIGHTS SLEEP

Creating a sleep calendar to track your sleep cycle and various issues with sleep can help you to determine the best course of action for your specific issues and circumstance.

Use the below calendar to track one month of sleep issues. Some things to pay attention to/track: sleep/wake times, sleep quality, diet/caffeine intake, exercise, specific stressors, disruptions (e.g., woken up by construction noise), any sleep strategies you tried. No need to track all, just what you feel may be relevant for you!
