ONE SMALL STEP

AN INTERACTIVE CONCERT WITH MUSIC, DANCE, AND NARRATION

February 1 – March 31, 2022

Virtual Children’s Concert
Over fifty years ago, a brave American man stepped out of a landing craft onto the surface of the moon and made history. With the help of the Demetrius Klein Dance Company and four exciting pieces of all-American music, Palm Beach Symphony brings that indelible moment of Milky Way magic to the stage through an interactive concert in which students will literally take part in exploring such scientific concepts as the Earth’s rotation, gravity and telescope viewing. All this while thrilling to a powerful Copland fanfare, the soaring themes of Star Wars and sharing the adventures of a very special resident of Earth’s satellite, Rocky de Luna, an inquisitive moon rock.

With a special narrative accompanied by the music of Copland’s Lincoln Portrait, students will meet Rocky as she hitches a ride with two friendly NASA astronauts on the Apollo 11 lunar module en route back to planet Earth. Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin show Rocky some out-of-this-world views of the moon, help define the moon’s place in the solar system, describe how the moon affects all life on Earth ... and leave Rocky with a sense of wonder and pride in her “rockdom”!

As part of the One Small Step program this year, Palm Beach Symphony offered virtual field trip opportunities to K – 12 grade students in Palm Beach and Broward Counties. Selected 3 – 5th grade classes were offered pre- and post-concert arts and science integrated workshops with teaching artists from the Symphony and DKDC, as well as from the South Florida Science Center and Aquarium.

His vast repertoire includes major 20th century ballets by composers Stravinsky, Strauss, Bartók, Ravel and Prokofiev, as well as multi-disc cycles of works by Schuman, Strauss, Wagner and Stravinsky. Schwarz’s dedication to the promotion of American music is also represented with his pioneering cycles of 26 American symphonists such as William Schuman, David Diamond, Walter Piston, Paul Creston, Peter Mennin, Alan Hovhaness and Howard Hanson. John Williams (Born 1932)

Star Wars Suite

When John Williams was born in 1932, movies with sound had only been around for a few years, and Hollywood directors were just figuring out how composers could improve their films. The first composers to become stars of film scoring came from Europe, and many had started their careers writing big, dramatic operas using enormous orchestras.

After finishing music school, Williams worked his way up in Hollywood, learning under those great European composers. He went on to become the top film composer in history, creating some of the most memorable themes of the last fifty years. It is hard to imagine what Jaws, E.T., Raiders of the Lost Ark, Jurassic Park or the Harry Potter movies would be without Williams’ music, among the many credits that have led to his 51 Oscar nominations.

Of all the films that Williams has worked on, the one he is most famous for is Star Wars from 1977. In music such as the opening theme, with its rising trumpet melody, Williams takes an old-fashioned orchestra on a wild, futuristic ride.

Joan Tower (Born 1938)

Fanfare for the Uncommon Woman

There have been extraordinary women composing great music for centuries, but it has been pretty much impossible for them to get the same respect as their male peers. Joan Tower, now in her eighties and still at the top of her game, was one of the first women to be seen as a leader among American composers. Thanks to her and other pioneers, more young women than ever before are establishing strong careers as composers.

Taking inspiration from Aaron Copland—and also poking fun at his title—Tower wrote the first part of Fanfare for the Uncommon Woman in 1986, dedicating it “to women who take risks and who are adventurous.” Her own adventurous approach to the orchestra shows how the traditional fanfare can move in fresh new directions, pushing an old art form into an exciting future.
