

JENNIFER D. GAROFOLO, MPH, MBA

Jenn Garofolo has over 26 years of pharmaceutical, biotech and health care experience in the Oncology, HIV, Cardiovascular and Neuroscience therapeutic areas. She started her career in HIV research at UMDNJ and then joined the Vaccine sales team at Merck. Jenn then spent the next 19 years at JNJ diversifying her career with positions of increasing responsibility in sales, training and marketing across various stages of product lifecycles. Jenn is currently the US Lead of Oncology Customer Marketing at GSK. She has received numerous sales, marketing and leadership awards throughout her career.

Jenn holds an MBA from the EMBA program at Rutgers (where she met the infamous Dr. Smith and learned to further how she lives out loud), an MPH from UMDNJ/Rutgers School of Public Health and earned a BS in degree from Brown University. She played D1 basketball, is an avid CrossFitter and is a national advocate for child mental health and suicide awareness.

Jenn has been married for 17 years to Craig and they have 3 children, Daniel, Alexa & Sienna. She's also working on her first book "Fighting for Their Lives."