The Caribbean's Nature Island

Nestled between Guadeloupe and Martinique, the beautiful, unspoiled island of Dominica is the Caribbean's best-kept secret. Secluded from mass tourism, the island attracts both eco-adventurers and those simply wishing to disconnect from everyday life. Surrounded by Cabrits National Park, the resort's unobtrusive design honours and preserves the natural beauty and ecosystem of this stunning, unexplored volcanic island. The resort is committed to protecting the authenticity of this pristine paradise for future generations of travellers to come, while today offers an enriching guest experience that strikes a natural balance between land and sea.

Room to Roam in Nature's Playground

Largely covered by wooded mountains and lush tropical rainforest, Dominica is known to have other Caribbean islands "green" with envy. In fact, when it came to describing Dominica to Queen Isabella of Spain, Christopher Columbus was at a loss for words. Now, more than 500 years later, the Nature Island's dramatic peaks, ravines and adventure-filled terrain are still leaving visitors speechless.

Hosting a variety of flora and fauna, including many rare plants, animals and bird species, Dominica is protected by an extensive natural park system that encompasses three national parks, two forest reserves and the Syndicate Parrot Reserve. Adventure seekers can enjoy eco-trekking on countless hiking trails, bird watching or simply observing wildlife in their natural surroundings.

Dominica is additionally home to the world's second largest hot spring and features 365 rivers, one for each day of the year, as well as cascading waterfalls and, of course, breath-taking beaches, ranging from sugar-white to black volcanic sand. With ample coastlines and coral reefs, Dominica also offers world-class diving and snorkelling for underwater adventures that feel out of this world.

While worlds away, guests will find all of the modern conveniences of home right at their fingertips, from flat screen televisions and complimentary WiFi service to in-room espresso machines and luxurious bath amenities.
