Not all lawyers are alike and Immediation Founder, Laura Keily, definitely breaks the mould. Backed by a team of experts, she is the innovator that is transforming the way disputes are resolved.

It is well documented that access to the legal system is out of reach for many people and businesses. As a barrister, I live and breathe the daily struggle of people and businesses to obtain legal remedies at a reasonable price.

The current court process is complex, lengthy and very expensive, with many judges and courts being overburdened. Typically, it can cost $10,000 just to open a solicitor’s file and the minimum legal fees for a small contested matter are likely to be around $50,000.

According to the Law Society of NSW Commission of Inquiry 2017 Report ‘Future of Law and Innovation in the Profession’, delays in court proceedings can cause serious societal problems. The inquiry also found that there is a greater role for technology and innovation to aid access to justice.

Businesses and consumers are increasingly demanding greater value, more competitive pricing and other reforms. The regulatory landscape has changed significantly, requiring businesses to resolve a greater number of disputes with customers than ever before. The community also is expressing a preference for important issues to be resolved in a more sophisticated manner than adversarial and acrimonious debate.

This is why I created Immediation.

Immediation
Dispute Resolution, redefined
Why it’s time for Immediation
Immediation is a highly efficient platform, provisional patent application pending, designed by Immediation’s team with over 150 years’ combined experience in the legal industry. With easy-to-follow steps, the platform was built by former Google engineers and leading UX designers under the guidance of Immediation’s Chief Technology Officer, Martin Wells, who is a Silicon Valley VP of Product and Engineering.

The platform includes streamlined workflows for dispute notification and document exchange. It also includes a new online resolution conference facility, provisional patent application pending, for fast, efficient and amicable negotiation, mediation and hearings.

The Immediation platform enables disputing parties to submit their side of a dispute online and to upload material evidence to support or defend their claim. It uses bespoke workflows to work through disputes in a sensible, logical format without legalese. After the online exchange of information, disputing parties can negotiate on the platform or are matched with an experienced neutral party for facilitated mediation, early-neutral evaluation, binding expert determination or binding international or domestic arbitration.

A customised video-conference tool is used to mimic a physical mediation centre. The mediator controls proceedings, enabling parties to convene in plenary session or in caucus with their lawyer. During the online conference, parties can text-chat privately or publicly and view information uploaded to the platform. On screen, the parties can work together on their settlement terms, which are instantly converted into a settlement agreement for e-signing via DocuSign.

In determinative dispute resolution, the online conference facility can be used for a hearing, with functionality to accommodate witnesses.

Resolution of dispute
Immediation’s first commercial service stream is for mediation, recognising the importance of facilitated negotiation in resolving the majority of disputes.

Shortly, Immediation will offer an additional 6 streams.

Each stream escalates in seriousness depending on the value and risk of the dispute and the needs of the parties:

Automated Negotiation Tool
An automated negotiation tool which helps parties to settle low value and low risk matters swiftly and without any need to interact by phone, video or face-to-face.

Evaluation
An online non-binding early evaluation of a dispute by a subject matter expert.

Negotiation
The parties may negotiate directly with or without lawyers, using the full functionality of the platform including the settlement agreement. No Immediation Panel member is involved.

Determination
An online expert determination of a legal dispute or a specific issue by a subject matter expert which is made binding by contract.

Mediation
An experienced mediator or subject matter expert will conduct an online mediation, with the aim of facilitating entry into a settlement agreement. Our mediation service has been designed so that it can be used either independently of, or in conjunction with, legal proceedings.

Review Panel
The parties can agree in advance to have the Determination reviewed by a panel of three experts.

Arbitration
An online arbitration conducted by a qualified arbitrator in accordance with relevant arbitral rules to produce an arbitral award, either domestic or international.
The Immediation Expert Panel

Immediation’s unique Expert Panel provides direct access to the right independent neutral for your dispute, including senior retired judges and Senior Counsel.

You can have confidence that the Immediation Expert Panel contains only appropriately qualified individuals to assist as independent neutrals and that we will accommodate your preference, or if no preference is expressed, nominate the right neutral for your dispute.

You will always be asked to approve a suggested neutral, if the parties have not pre-agreed their choice.

Our Expert Panel members include former justices, Tribunal members, QC/SCs, leading barristers, arbitrators and mediators, and leading lawyers from top-tier international, national and boutique specialist firms. The Panel includes subject specialists in areas such as property, employment, commercial, intellectual property, insolvency and litigation. Going beyond law, many of our experts have technical expertise in areas as construction, engineering, valuation, tax and telecommunications.
Why is Immediation right for you?
Flexible Resolution Solutions

Use of Immediation for pre-trial mediation

The standard mediation platform can be used where no proceedings have been instituted and is designed to avoid pleadings, promoting interest-based negotiation.

We understand that sometimes it is not possible to avoid proceedings being issued. Immediation’s platform can still be useful as a fast and effective mediation tool for a fixed price and in a fixed timeframe.

Immediation will present a customised workflow for pre-trial mediation where proceedings have been instituted. Sometimes it is very unlikely that the matter will resolve even though the parties have been sent back to mediation. The myriad benefits of using Immediation for pre-trial mediation in this instance include:
- speed;
- reduction in cost and travel time;
- access to the Panel of expert mediators in a definite timeframe;
- the ability to narrow the issues in dispute;
- the ability to more accurately predict the settlement range and make a Calderbank offer.

Flexible and adaptable

As the Immediation team has significant domain expertise, we understand how businesses interact with their lawyers and with independent neutrals throughout a resolution process, and how different representatives of an organisation are involved throughout the lifetime of a dispute. We believe that being in a fast online environment does not mean a compromise on flexibility.

The Immediation platform has been designed to flex to the needs of businesses as they move through a dispute. For example, the executive who receives the dispute notification can pass it to their lawyer to deal with. A lawyer can be in the drivers’ seat, with the client having oversight, or vice versa.

In some cases, clients may feel comfortable to drive all of part of the process on their own. Clients can invite various parties, be they a lawyer, insurer or other representative, to participate. Different levels of access and functionality have been built in to accommodate witnesses, legal representatives and other participants in a mediation or hearing. Drafting and signing power can be allocated to different corporate representatives.

What if I prefer physical mediation or arbitration?

We are convinced that once you’ve used the platform, you’ll be a convert, like our pilot clients. The video resolution in our conference facility is very high, enabling you to read body language and expression in the normal way.

Our platform has been designed to enable you to have private conversations between client and lawyer teams, so there is no need to be physically co-located with them.

But we understand that in some cases you might like to be present in the same location. If required, a physical mediation or hearing can be arranged to complement the Immediation platform.

The platform can still be used as a tool to assist with the mediation itself, particularly the drafting and signing of the settlement agreements, even if you are co-located.
The Immediation team understands that construction companies seek commercial options to resolve commercial disputes in a swift, cost-effective and risk-aware manner. This presents a challenge for construction companies in a market with increasing cost pressure, volatility and risk, which naturally gives rise to a higher volume of issues.

This challenge is also an opportunity for innovation.

Why Immediation for construction companies?

Immediation has been vetted by the Federal Government, receiving an AusIndustry ‘Accelerating Commercialisation Grant’ in 2019.

The Immediation team understands that managing disputes and particularly litigation uses precious funds and resources and slows down project outcomes. We want to help construction companies resolve disputes in the most efficient way possible, at your desk and in your own time.

Immediation can assist construction companies to shepherd through disputes without engaging in adversarial process, enabling the better management of relationships with key stakeholders and contracting parties.

Using Immediation, appointment of the independent neutral doesn’t become a dispute in itself. Immediation enables construction companies to expand the list of potential independent neutrals in each case, opening up extensive possibilities including those neutrals interstate, for the same fixed fee, without having to do any behind-the-scenes administration.

Immediation in construction and significant projects

The Immediation team has significant experience in construction and project work, as well as litigation. We understand that when a dispute arises in a key project contract that is ongoing, construction companies require access to fast, impartial dispute resolution techniques designed to keep the parties out of court. Ideally the specified mechanism would give you certainty as to cost, timeframe and process.

Immediation achieves certainty in a new way.

Immediation’s timeframes are fixed

We ensure that the matter is brought to mediation or hearing in a short timeframe, which can be less than 30 days for mediations and between 30 to 60 days for expert determination or arbitration matters. In certain cases, even expert determination or arbitration could be more quickly expedited.

Immediation’s costs are fixed

Costs for the dispute resolution service are linked to the value of the dispute, including the neutral and the platform. Where no dispute value can be identified, we can pre-agree rates for services such as expert determination of whether practical completion has occurred.

Immediation has access to 90 Expert Panel members

Our Expert Panel has many specialists qualified to mediate, determine or arbitrate construction and project matters. Where further or different neutrals are required, Immediation can source these enabling construction companies to maintain impartiality.

Immediation’s online process streamlines matters

This avoids the need for external counsel correspondence and delay. In particular the online negotiation, mediation and hearing tool can accommodate multiple parties, legally represented, in a fast and effective manner. If required, physical mediation or hearing can be arranged to complement the Immediation platform.

Immediation is easy to understand and is not legalistic

Project managers can use the platform together with lawyers in a way never before known in the market, so that project managers can do the heavy lifting allowing lawyers or managers oversight or vice versa.
Immediation in project and construction contracts

To create certainty, Immediation can work with construction companies to create standard clauses to embed Immediation as a dispute resolution mechanism in your project contracts. That way, when a dispute arises, the parties have access to a fixed fee, fixed timeframe process incorporated into your contracts that can assist in the early amicable resolution of the dispute.

The first step could be negotiation, which enables parties to resolve the matter themselves using the full functionality of the Immediation platform.

If mediation is required, we can appoint one or more mediators on an ongoing basis, to assist you to resolve and intercept potential disputes amicably as and when they arise. Alternatively, we can provide senior mediators on a case-by-case basis to deal with matters of escalated severity. Expert determination and arbitration can also be mandated for particular types of disputes.

We can provide you with a suite of clauses, including cascading options for different services, and preferred pricing.
