Name of platform	Price	Pros	Cons
Cleanfeed	$34/month	• Audio is clean and clear • Desktop and mobile friendly • Platform has an audiometer to make sure you and your guest stay at the right levels	• No video option available • Doesn't offer dial in features for recording with your guests • You need to generate and send separate links to each guests
Zencastr	$20/month	• There are separate tracks for each guest on the recording making it easier to edit • Your recordings can automatically be synced to your drive accounts	• No video option available • Overall the interface isn't attractive or easy to use • No audiometer available during recordings
Squadcast	$17/month	• Has automatic backups during your recordings so you never lose your files • There's a "Green Room" for your guests to test their audio levels before entering the session	• No Dial in feature available • Sometimes you can hear an echo from your guests during the recording
Cast	$10/month	• Offers recording, editing, and publishing services • No logins are required from guests • During the recording live text chats are available	• No video option available • The platforms interface isn't as easy to use as other platforms • You can only edit your audio files within Cast
Soundtrap	$15/month	• The platforms interface is clean and easy to use • You can record and guests on separate tracks • You can easily download and edit the episodes transcription	• No video option available • There's only one guest allowed for remote recordings • There's no audio meter available so you can't tell if your guests sound quality is off or peaking

Zoom	$20/month	• Both audio and video options are available • There's a dial in option available for guests • A live chat is available during the recording for you and guests	• Doesn't offer good sound quality. Not recommended for podcasting. • Unable to create separate audio tracks for each speaker • All guests must have the Zoom app downloaded to access the recording