

DEVELOPMENT CO-OPERATION DIRECTORATE DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE COMMITTEE

DAC Recommendation on Ending Sexual Exploitation, Abuse, and Harassment in Development Co-operation and Humanitarian Assistance: Key Pillars of Prevention and Response

The DAC Recommendation on Ending Sexual Exploitation, Abuse, and Harassment in Development Co-operation and Humanitarian Assistance: Key Pillars of Prevention and Response, set out in Annex A, was ADOPTED and DECLASSIFIED by written procedure on 12 July 2019.

Contacts: Paloma Duran y Lalaguna – Paloma.Duranylalaguna@oecd.org
Lisa Williams - Lisa.Williams@oecd.org

JT03449830

DAC Recommendation on Ending Sexual Exploitation, Abuse, and Harassment in Development Co-operation and Humanitarian Assistance: Key Pillars of Prevention and Response

Background information

Despite continuing efforts by the international development community, sexual exploitation and abuse (SEA) and sexual harassment (SH) persist in development co-operation and humanitarian assistance. It is essential to increase efforts to prevent and respond to all forms of SEA and SH, recognising that gender-based violence and violence against women and girls remain some of the most prevalent human rights violations and abuses in the world. The power imbalances and gender inequalities that underlie these issues need to be addressed across organisations. All development and humanitarian actors must take more robust action and improve local and international practice and standards, in accordance with their national legal and institutional frameworks.

Rationale for developing the DAC Recommendation

The members of the Development Assistance Committee (DAC) aim to protect communities and individuals from SEA and SH wherever development co-operation and humanitarian assistance activities are implemented and during their delivery. The DAC Recommendation on Ending Sexual Exploitation, Abuse, and Harassment in Development Co-operation and Humanitarian Assistance: Key Pillars of Prevention and Response (hereafter, the “DAC Recommendation”) is the first international instrument on SEA and SH that applies to development co-operation and humanitarian assistance.

The DAC Recommendation aims to embody an ambitious standard to build systems best fit to prevent and respond to SEA and SH. In addition, it includes provisions aimed at supporting DAC members and non-DAC members having adhered to the Recommendation (hereafter “Adherents”) in their efforts to implement the commitments it contains, establish mechanisms for continued shared learning, and monitor progress in combatting these issues, while ensuring a survivor- and victim-centred approach.

A survivor- and victim-centred approach is essential for effective prevention and response to SEA and SH, must be based on the wishes and needs of survivors and victims, requires listening to those who are affected, responding robustly and sensitively, and learning from every case. DAC members have recognised the need for this DAC Recommendation on SEA and SH to support prevention efforts and integrate the survivor- and victim-centred approach as an overarching principle throughout their work. All those engaged in prevention and response recognise that the rights, needs, wishes, and empowerment of survivors and victims have implications for the design and implementation of all policies and programmes, thus a survivor and victim-centred approach is integrated throughout the DAC Recommendation. This approach requires that prevention and response be contextualised, culturally appropriate, and embedded in an understanding of the local and national legislative frameworks. Effective survivor- and victim-centred approaches will require adequate investment in resources and research to build future international best practice, taking into consideration the need to tackle the power imbalances and gender inequalities that underlie these issues.

Scope of the DAC Recommendation

The DAC Recommendation provides a comprehensive framework to support, guide, incentivise, and help Adherents to implement more coherent and aligned measures, consistent with applicable international standards, and to prevent and respond to SEA and SH in their activities in the disbursement and/or management of international aid. This includes Adherents – in their capacity as donors, cross-government and international community stakeholders – putting survivors and victims first, supporting organisational cultural change, building capacity, strengthening accountability, and bolstering the integrity of the international aid sector.

The DAC Recommendation is built around six pillars:

- i) Policies, professional conduct standards, organisational change, and leadership;
- ii) Survivor/victim-centred response and support mechanisms;
- iii) Organisational reporting, response systems, and procedures;
- iv) Training, awareness raising, and communication;
- v) International coordination; and
- vi) Monitoring, evaluation, shared learning, and reporting.

While the DAC Recommendation does not seek to precisely define SEA and SH, certain sources may provide useful guidance for its dissemination, interpretation, and implementation.

For example, certain bulletins issued by the UN Secretary-General - which are applicable to UN staff for the purpose of preventing and addressing cases of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse in the UN system - pertain to “sexual exploitation” and “sexual abuse”. Specifically bulletin ST/SGB/2003/13, states that sexual exploitation means “any actual or attempted abuse by personnel of a position of vulnerability, differential power or trust for sexual purposes, including but not limited to, profiting momentarily, socially or politically from the sexual exploitation of another.” “Sexual exploitation” is thus a broad term that includes, for example, transactional sex, solicitation of transactional sex, and exploitative relationships. With respect to “sexual abuse”, the same bulletin provides that the term “means actual or threatened physical intrusion of a sexual nature, whether by force or under unequal or coercive conditions”.

Concerning “sexual harassment,” the UN General Assembly Resolution ‘Intensification of efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls: sexual harassment,’(A/RES/73/148) stresses that sexual harassment “encompasses a continuum of unacceptable and unwelcome behaviours and practices of a sexual nature that may include, but are not limited to, sexual suggestions or demands, requests for sexual favours and sexual, verbal or physical conduct or gestures, that are or might reasonably be perceived as offensive or humiliating.”

Lastly, where the term “children” is used in the DAC Recommendation, DAC members took into account the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child which defines “children” as any person under the age of 18.

An inclusive process for developing the DAC Recommendation

At the DAC meeting in June 2018, the Committee established a DAC Reference Group on PSEA to guide the scoping and development of a potential DAC instrument on PSEA, Co-Chaired by delegates from Austria, Ireland and the United Kingdom. The DAC Reference Group on PSEA met seven times and has been supported by an internal Development Co-operation Directorate (DCD) Task Force, which was established in April 2018 and led by the DCD Gender Equality and Women's Empowerment Team. In order to ensure diversity, inclusivity and coordination with other processes and hear from diverse actors, the DAC Reference Group included representatives from organisations, including the United Nations and the Inter-Agency Standing Committee, the World Bank, two civil-society representatives, and non-DAC member countries.

The Reference Group has worked closely with Civil Society Organisations (CSOs), in line with the DAC-CSO Framework on Engagement, to help ensure that the DAC Recommendation would assist both DAC members and implementing partners in aligning their actions on SEA and SH prevention and response. CSOs were actively engaged in the meetings of the DAC Reference Group and developed a questionnaire for CSOs to provide detailed input, as well as a webinar. Through its CSO representation, the consultation questionnaire was developed, and members sent it to national CSO platforms, a process which led to responses from more than 200 networks. The Reference Group collected input from civil society on their priorities for SEA and SH prevention and response, as well as perspectives on how donors can strengthen prevention efforts and ensure a survivor- and victim-centred approach. The DAC Reference Group aimed to reach a wide geographic diversity and gain participation by CSOs who otherwise may not be able to engage with the DAC, including both survivors and victims and the organisations working with them.

The development of the DAC Recommendation was also informed by information on member practices in preventing and responding to SEA and SH gathered through an in-depth survey of practices sent to DAC members in 2018, which received responses from 26 out of 30 DAC members.

In February 2019, the DAC Senior Level Meeting discussed and supported a set of pillars for a DAC Recommendation [DCD/DAC(2019)10]. These pillars formed the basis for developing a DAC Recommendation text, following which, a series of draft versions of the DAC Recommendation benefitted from discussion and comments in multiple Reference Group meetings, from DAC delegates through written procedure, and in the 18 June [DCD/DAC(2019)31] and 10 July 2019 [DCD/DAC(2019)31/REV1] DAC meetings.

The DAC Recommendation, as set out in Annex A, was adopted on 12 July 2019.

Monitoring implementation, dissemination and adherence

The DAC Recommendation contains a provision instructing the DAC Network on Gender Equality (GENDERNET) to monitor its implementation through the existing DAC peer-review mechanism, and to develop options for more frequent monitoring and review within the first five years. This will enable and support lesson-learning and sharing of best practices to build understanding and capability. GENDERNET will report to the DAC no later than five years following the adoption of the DAC Recommendation and at least every ten years thereafter.

The DAC Recommendation invites the OECD Secretary-General and Adherents to disseminate the Recommendation. The DAC Recommendation is available on the compendium of OECD Legal Instruments, along with the other DAC Recommendations. A booklet containing background information is accessible in PDF format to facilitate dissemination. To ensure dissemination of the DAC Recommendation, the Secretary-General, through the DAC Secretariat, will share the DAC Recommendation with all its networks as well as during technical activities and events.

The DAC Recommendation is open to non-Member adherence, which would represent those Adherents' political commitment to the principles set out in the DAC Recommendation. Such non-Member adherence would send a message of broad support for SEA and SH prevention and response in the international aid sector, through effective due diligence systems and a survivor/victim-centred approach. Non-Member Adherents would be included in the monitoring and implementation report.

Annex A. DAC Recommendation on Ending Sexual Exploitation, Abuse, and Harassment in Development Co-operation and Humanitarian Assistance: Key Pillars of Prevention and Response

THE OECD DEVELOPMENT ASSISTANCE COMMITTEE (DAC),

HAVING REGARD to the Recommendation of the Council on Gender Equality in Education, Employment and Entrepreneurship [OECD/LEGAL/0398]; the Recommendation of the Council for Development Co-operation Actors on Managing the Risk of Corruption [OECD/LEGAL/0431]; the Recommendation of the Council on Gender Equality in Public Life [OECD/LEGAL/0418]; and the DAC Recommendation on the Humanitarian-Development-Peace Nexus [OECD/LEGAL/5019];

HAVING REGARD to the DAC Tidewater Joint Statement on Combatting Sexual Exploitation and Abuse in the Development and Humanitarian Sectors and the Whistler Declaration on Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Abuse in International Assistance committed to by the G7 Development Ministers;

HAVING REGARD to the Commitments made by donors to tackle sexual exploitation and abuse and sexual harassment in the international aid sector at the 2018 London Safeguarding Summit;

HAVING REGARD to the foundation provided by international instruments on various aspects of gender equality and human rights, notably the principles embodied in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and relevant provisions of International Humanitarian Law, including the Geneva Conventions and protocols thereto; the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights; the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights; the United Nations (UN) Convention on the Rights of the Child; the UN Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination against Women; the UN Declaration on the Elimination of Violence against Women (A/RES/48/104); the UN Comprehensive Strategy on Assistance and Support to Victims of Sexual Exploitation and Abuse by UN Staff and Related Personnel (A/RES/62/214); the UN Protocol on Allegations of Sexual Exploitation and Abuse involving Implementing Partners; the 2018 UN General Assembly Resolution on Intensification of efforts to prevent and eliminate all forms of violence against women and girls: sexual harassment (A/RES/73/148); and the Council of Europe Convention on preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence;

HAVING REGARD to relevant political commitments made within the UN context, including the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development; the 1994 Programme of Action of the International Conference on Population and Development; the 1995 Beijing Declaration and Platform for Action of the Fourth UN World Conference on Women and the outcome documents of their review conferences;

RECOGNISING that sexual exploitation and abuse (SEA) and sexual harassment (SH) are unacceptable and in defiance of applicable international standards and international law and that SEA and SH constitute unacceptable behaviour that has lasting, traumatic and deleterious impacts on individuals and communities and, where perpetrated by aid providers and their partners, call into question the integrity of the international aid community and the credibility of aid itself;

RECOGNISING that SEA and SH risk undermining global efforts to achieve the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, in particular Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) 5, “Achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls”;

RECOGNISING that the risk of SEA and SH increases when donors and their partners fail to set organisational cultures and norms that prevent SEA and SH or act to proactively manage and mitigate risk, including exacerbated risks that arise when operating in contexts of fragile, conflict-affected environments where power imbalances and gender inequality may more easily persist;

RECOGNISING that donors and their partners need to strengthen coordination and coherence in preventing and responding to incidences of SEA and SH, building a strong donor platform to lead cultural organisational change and accountability; respond to victims and survivors and tackle impunity; strengthen capacity across the aid sector; recognise the critical role of women’s rights organisations and women-led organisations in preventing and responding to violence against women and girls, and the need to ensure their central role in international and local efforts to prevent and respond to SEA and SH; and align around applicable international standards to reduce the likelihood and impact of SEA and SH perpetrated through actors delivering international aid;

RECOGNISING the UN efforts to prevent and respond to SEA and SH, including the UN Secretary General’s Report on Special Measures for Protection from Sexual Exploitation and Sexual Abuse: A new approach (2017); the UN Secretary General’s Bulletins: Special Measures for protection sexual exploitation and sexual abuse (2003), Prohibition of discrimination, harassment, including sexual harassment, and abuse of authority (2008), and Protection against retaliation for reporting misconduct and for cooperating with duly authorized audits and investigation (2017); UN Security Council Resolutions on Women, Peace and Security, including Resolution 1325 (2000) and subsequent resolutions up to and including Resolution 2242 (2015); Model Policy on Sexual Harassment (2018); as well as the important work done by the UN Special Coordinator on improving the UN response to SEA, the UN Victim’s Rights Advocate, the UN Trust Fund for victims of SEA, the Voluntary Compact between the UN Secretary General and individual Member States, the Circle of Leadership on the Prevention of and Response to sexual exploitation and abuse in United Nations operations, the Civil Society Advisory Board on prevention of sexual exploitation and abuse, and the Grand Bargain’s Agenda for Humanity (2016); and the Charter on Inclusion of Persons with Disabilities in Humanitarian Action (2016);

RECOGNISING the Inter-Agency Standing Committee’s Principles and Minimum Operating Standards on Prevention of Sexual Exploitation and Abuse (MOS-PSEA), and the Core Humanitarian Standard on Quality and Accountability (CHS), as essential international standards;

RECOGNISING the importance of integrating a survivor- and victim-centred approach into PSEA and SH policies, in line with four guiding principles of: (i) safety; (ii) confidentiality; (iii) respect; and (iv) non-discrimination described in the UN Comprehensive Strategy on Assistance and Support to Victims of Sexual Exploitation and Abuse by UN Staff and Related Personnel (A/RES/62/214), as well as that child survivors require particular attention to ensure their safety, protection, and well-being;

RECOGNISING that SEA and SH are deeply rooted in structural inequality, especially gender inequality, that give rise to gender-based violence, among other forms of violence, and discrimination;

RECOGNISING that SEA and SH can constitute a violation or abuse of human rights, and thus the promotion, protection, and respect of human rights must be at the core of preventing and combatting SEA and SH. Ensuring a human-rights based approach that does no harm in development co-operation and humanitarian assistance is fundamental. Particular attention is needed for vulnerable groups, including women and children, and those most at risk of discrimination on the basis of, for example, disability, gender identity and sexual orientation, race, ethnicity, age or religion;

I. AGREES that for the purpose of the present Recommendation, the following definitions are used:

- a. International development agency (also referred to as donor) refers to government line ministries or other public or private agencies entrusted with the responsibility of disbursing public funds that are accounted for as Official Development Assistance (ODA).
- b. Implementing partners refers to government's line ministries or other public agencies, as well as partners of international development agencies such as developing countries' governments, public bodies including local authorities, non-governmental and civil-society organisations, trade unions, multilateral development and humanitarian organisations, and suppliers of goods and services involved in implementing aid projects or programmes or private-sector organisations recipient of aid funds.

II. AGREES that the purpose of this DAC Recommendation is to provide a comprehensive framework that can support, guide, incentivise, and help DAC and non-DAC members having adhered to it (hereafter the "Adherents") in their capacity as donors, cross-government and international community stakeholders to implement more comprehensive, coherent and aligned measures, consistent with applicable international standards and taking into account national laws, to prevent and respond to SEA and SH in their activities in the disbursement and/or management of aid. This includes putting survivors and victims first, supporting organisational cultural change, building capacity, strengthening accountability, and bolstering the integrity of the international aid sector.

III. RECOMMENDS that Adherents set up or revise their development co-operation and humanitarian assistance systems to strengthen SEA and SH prevention and response, manage risk, and support and protect survivors and victims. Adherents should take measures to ensure that these systems are implemented by their international development agencies and implementing partners in all of their activities in the disbursement and/or management of aid, based on adequate resources. In setting up or revising these systems, and as appropriate to relevant mandates, roles and responsibilities, Adherents should:

1. Develop policies and professional conduct standards and seek to foster organisational change and leadership on SEA and SH in the provision of international aid. To this effect, Adherents should, as appropriate:
  - a. Foster improved organisational culture and norms through effective value-based leadership and guidance on goals, values, behaviours, and expectations related to SEA and SH prevention and response, including the promotion of inclusive, non-discriminatory, gender-balanced work environments and opportunities, including by encouraging the recruitment and career development of women in senior leadership and throughout organisations.

- b. Ensure sustained senior-level engagement and leadership commitments to shift or sustain positive organisational culture and norms in relation to SEA and SH prevention and response, through regular senior-level discussions on how these issues are addressed, and also ensure dedicated organisational capacity to support and coordinate work on SEA and SH, recognising the links to broader human rights and commitments to gender equality.
  - c. Develop policies, strategies, and work plans for SEA and SH prevention and response that are effectively implemented; set goals and standards; demonstrate a coherent approach; and support implementation of related work streams. In these policies, Adherents should make it clear that failure to respond appropriately to incidents of SEA and SH will not be tolerated, while prevention and response should be based on a survivor and victim-centred approach that aims to do no harm.
  - d. Develop Codes of Conduct or Ethical Standards providing explicit standards and regulations to prevent and combat SEA and SH, ensuring they are publicly available and conveyed to staff and senior management consistently throughout key employment cycle moments (including recruitment and disciplinary processes), in preparation for and during missions, in performance management structures, and within leadership values. Such codes of conduct and ethical standards should be shared with implementing partners and actively communicated in relevant languages and formats to local communities where relevant.
  - e. Develop reporting and response protocols, with clear guidelines for staff on when and to whom to report, and how to respond in a confidential, survivor- and victim-centred and ethically-sensitive manner. Staff should be aware of the obligation to report SEA and SH incidents, with a set time frame for response and follow-up mechanisms, and know that a policy for protection from retaliation is in place, recognising that improved accountability mechanisms may lead to more reporting of SEA and SH incidents.
  - f. Include standards, procedures, requirements, and/or binding commitments in all cooperative agreements and funding instruments (for example, contracts, grants, memoranda of understanding) alongside remedies for breaches and reporting requirements.
2. Develop or support survivor- and victim-centred response and support mechanisms. These mechanisms should:
- a. Provide for a survivor- and victim-centred approach to SEA and SH prevention and response, where survivors and victims' experiences, rights, needs, and wants are at the centre of reporting, investigative, and response systems, and to ensure donors and implementing partners respond in a timely manner and support and protect survivors and victims throughout the process. This approach should take special consideration of vulnerable groups, including women and children, as well as people most at risk of discrimination on the basis of, for example, disability, gender identity and sexual orientation, race, ethnicity, age or religion. A survivor- and victim-centred approach should be grounded in respect for human rights, as well as respect, confidentiality, safety, and non-discrimination.
  - b. Include a variety of effective, clear, and simple survivor- and victim-centred complaints mechanisms that are available to all community members, with clear requirements and guidance on when and how the mechanisms might be used, and ensure appropriate linkages to and support for the provision of survivors' and victims' assistance. Complaints mechanisms, including community-based mechanisms, should be developed and implemented, adapted to specific local and cultural contexts, and used in co-operation with local leadership, and with authorities where safe and appropriate, and to the maximum extent practicable, be jointly supported.

- c. Provide integrated and safe response and protection for those who report SEA and SH, including survivors and victims, in collaboration with relevant stakeholders such as: the United Nations; Civil Society Organisations (CSOs) and local women's organisations; local and national governments where safe and appropriate; and public bodies including local authorities. Adherents should develop guidance and minimum standards for survivors' and victims' assistance, redress, and support, including by mapping out key stakeholders and service providers for referrals, and by seeking to provide required financing support that is jointly supported to the maximum extent practicable.
  - d. Seek to strengthen existing local services and networks and coordination with gender-based violence and child-protection services, also to address violence against girls, where appropriate. A survivor- and victim-centred approach should be integrated into broader efforts to strengthen responses to gender-based violence and SEA and SH at the local level, including strengthening the rule of law and access to justice. Efforts should aim to improve the quality and availability of referral services and protection mechanisms to minimise the risks of survivor and victim stigmatisation.
3. Establish organisational reporting and response systems and procedures for the prevention of SEA and SH. These systems and procedures should include:
- a. Internal complaint and investigation procedures that are context-specific and survivor- and victim-centred, and that include established functions and mechanisms to handle incidents and allegations for donors and implementing partners. Adherents should explore independent mechanisms as appropriate, noting that alleged perpetrators also have privacy rights.
  - b. Easy, safe, accessible, context-sensitive, culturally appropriate reporting and complaint mechanisms that are confidential and anonymous through which affected individuals and communities can report incidents, and which are coordinated to ensure consistency in response efforts. These could include independent whistleblowing mechanisms available to staff, partners, aid recipients, and their families and communities, as well as other stakeholders, involving local and national governments where safe and appropriate, and in accordance with their national legal and institutional frameworks.
  - c. Protection from retaliation for those affected or who report, including whistleblowers, by having a policy for protection from retaliation in place.
  - d. Support for local capacity, rule of law, access to justice, and increased accountability, through development co-operation and humanitarian assistance, depending on the local context.

- e. Strengthened transparent reporting and investigation mechanisms and procedures to ensure internal and external accountability, support prevention, and improve access to information, taking into consideration the safety, wants, needs, and rights of survivors and victims with regard to information-sharing, confidentiality, consent, and risk assessment, for the protection of the survivor and victim and with the aim of preventing future incidents.
  - f. Policies and processes to ensure both mechanisms and management responsibilities to ensure accountability for staff when necessary, including dismissal, suspension, and other administrative measures. At the same time, positive incentives to promote good practice and rewards for learning and improvement should be used to foster a culture of inclusion, trust, and openness to enable accountability and transparency.
  - g. Clearly communicated mechanisms to tackle impunity, and penalties for staff violations of codes of conduct.
  - h. Effective and transparent recruitment, performance management, and referral practices to prevent the hiring (e.g., re-hiring, transfer, or promotion) of perpetrators, including improved mechanisms for screening candidates' backgrounds, references, and criminal records checks for former misconduct.
4. Conduct training, raise awareness, and communicate on SEA and SH prevention.
These measures require adequate ongoing resourcing and should include:
- a. Effective communication to raise community awareness on SEA and SH response, including the provision of information on: applicable national laws, donor agency standards, and codes of conduct; requirements and expected behaviour of donor management, staff, and implementing partners, including the private sector; and how complaint mechanisms can be used to report violations.
  - b. Regular training and capacity building for management and staff on standards, codes of conduct, mechanisms to file complaints and report misconduct, and the implications of breaching standards, including anti-retaliation policies, to ensure effective cultural change and promote a safe, confident, and mutually-respectful work environment. Training and capacity building should be linked to, or aligned with, gender equality training and capacity building. Where possible, designated focal functions for SEA and SH prevention should receive professional training.
  - c. Awareness-raising activities and educational, preventative outreach efforts or programmes with implementing partners to ensure aid recipients and local populations are aware of their rights, reporting mechanisms, and available support services. Aid beneficiaries and local populations should be consulted in the design of SEA and SH response programmes, and wider programming where appropriate, to ensure their needs are met. This could include capacity building and training of established local organisations, including women's rights organisations, and in-country SEA and SH prevention networks and mechanisms. Tools and materials should be shared between headquarters, field offices, implementing partners, and local and national governments, as well as public bodies including local authorities, where safe and appropriate; in relation to gender equality and non-discrimination, to prevent and protect against SEA and SH.

5. Ensure international coordination for SEA and SH prevention and response. To this effect, Adherents should:
    - a. Coordinate internationally with donors and implementing partners to set clear standards and expectations, align existing measures to the extent possible, respond to survivors' and victims' needs, and take comprehensive action in SEA and SH prevention and response.
    - b. Include existing commitments by some DAC members as a policy basis for action on prevention and response, including the Core Humanitarian Standard on Quality and Accountability (CHS), the Inter-Agency Standing Committee Minimum Operating Standards (MOS-PSEA), relevant OECD and DAC Recommendations, and other relevant international commitments, including the Commitments made by donors to tackle sexual exploitation and abuse and sexual harassment in the international aid sector at the 2018 London Safeguarding Summit.
    - c. Ensure closer co-operation and collaboration among DAC members, implementing partners, and international and national experts on SEA and SH prevention and response; the UN, specifically the Inter-Agency Standing Committee (IASC); and the UN System Chief Executives Board for Coordination (CEB). Particular efforts should be made to align standards for survivors' and victims' support, investigation management, and reporting by implementing partners.
    - d. Support the development of measures to jointly assess the performance of multilateral organisations with regard to their approach to SEA and SH, such as those currently under development by the Multilateral Organisation Performance Assessment Network (MOPAN).
    - e. Dedicate resources – including financial and personnel – to realise the goals of this DAC Recommendation and to ensure that implementing partners can uphold these standards.
  6. Develop mechanisms for monitoring, evaluation, and reporting on SEA and SH prevention and response. To this effect, Adherents should:
    - a. Establish mechanisms for monitoring and reviewing responses, support, and follow-up, such as independent progress and impact assessments, evaluations, or review mechanisms on best practices and lessons learned, and common definitions.
    - b. Improve data, including sex- and age-disaggregated data, qualitative and quantitative measures, and assessments and evaluations of agencies and partners' initiatives that ensure confidentiality for survivors, victims and vulnerable groups. These efforts could include disaggregating data to be able to use it across organisations, locations, and time to learn and detect trends that would inform gaps in all the other areas.
- IV. INVITES the Secretary-General to disseminate this DAC Recommendation;
- V. INVITES Adherents to disseminate this DAC Recommendation, particularly throughout their development, humanitarian, and peacebuilding agencies and partners, and across government;
- VI. INVITES non-Adherents to take account of and adhere to this DAC Recommendation;

VII. ENCOURAGES relevant non-governmental partners, contractors, and grantees to disseminate and follow this DAC Recommendation;

VIII. INSTRUCTS the DAC Network on Gender Equality to:

- a. Support a multi-stakeholder forum in which Adherents, through a consultative process, share policies, best practices, and innovative approaches to SEA and SH prevention and response in order to support mutual learning and adaptation, and develop tools for the implementation of this DAC Recommendation;
- b. Monitor and learn in the implementation of this DAC Recommendation, including through the existing DAC peer-review mechanism, and applicable international agreements, such as those on women, peace and security, and develop options for more frequent monitoring and review, within the first five years to enable and support lesson-learning, adaptation, and sharing of best practices to build understanding and capability;
- c. Report thereon to the DAC no later than five years following the adoption of this DAC Recommendation and at least every ten years thereafter.