Well-capitalized Seattle start-up seeks Unix developers

Jeff Bezos

8/22/94

Well-capitalized start-up seeks extremely talented C/C++/Unix developers to help pioneer commerce on the Internet. You must have experience designing and building large and complex (yet maintainable) systems, and you should be able to do so in about one-third the time that most competent people think possible. You should have a BS, MS, or PhD in Computer Science or the equivalent. Top-notch communication skills are essential. Familiarity with web servers and HTML would be helpful but is not necessary.

Expect talented, motivated, intense, and interesting co-workers. Must be willing to relocate to the Seattle area (we will help cover moving costs).

Your compensation will include meaningful equity ownership.

Send resume and cover letter to Jeff Bezos:

mail: be...@netcom.com

fax: 206/828-0951

US mail: Cadabra, Inc.
10704 N.E. 28th St.
Bellevue, WA 98004

We are an equal opportunity employer.

PYREX VISION SS2013.1 YOUTH ALWAYS WINS

SHOP CONTACT

From American designer, Virgil Abloh.

The winner will always be young.

It's all based of his high school experience. Pusha-T drug raps. Champion gym uniforms. Caravaggio obsession. Michael Jordan as God. Kurt Cobain felt the most real. Black kid with white tendencies.

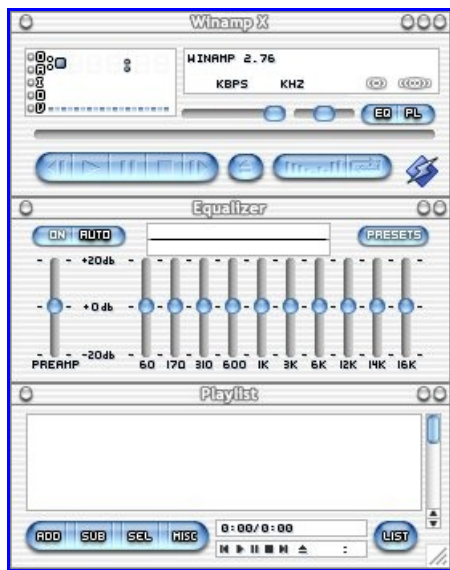

That juxtaposition.

Being self-taught was the extent of his art education. Added help from youth street skate culture combined with living in Rome, Paris, living and breathing that.

YOUTH WINS GAMES no matter the sport. Pavement. Concrete.

JODI, Joan Heemskerk, Dirk Paesmans - My%Desktop (2002)

via <https://www.are.na/block/5760403>
<https://www.moma.org/collection/works/193145?>

The artist duo JODI made My%Desktop by connecting a computer to a camcorder and capturing the pair's interactions with the Mac OS 9 desktop system and design. For this work, described by the artists as a "desktop performance," JODI deliberately exploited the basic functions of the user-friendly interface, rendering them useless: files open at a maddening pace, hundreds of overlapping windows obscure one another, and a nerve-racking number of error messages appear. The resultant chaos, presented as four adjacent video projections and accompanied by a jarring cacophony of Mac alert sounds, might suggest that an anarchic virus has taken control of the computer, when in fact it is the product of frenzied choreography performed by the artists themselves. Through its destabilization of the operating system—a symbol of bureaucratic order in contemporary life—JODI's intervention tests the limits of popular technology and a society driven by consumer-grade gadgets.

JODI first gained notoriety for its web-based works created in the mid-1990s, which exposed the chaotic, code-driven underbelly of websites as unintelligible, flickering amalgamations of text characters. Pieces like My%Desktop, which is the first in a body of work by JODI informally known as "screen grabs," similarly turn systems of technological order against themselves, resulting in mesmerizing depictions of entropic digital landscapes.
