Dear supporters, colleagues, and codesigners,

I'm writing to let you know about some changes at the Graphic Advocacy Project. This summer, I am joining Seton Hall Law School as the inaugural director of the New Jersey Legal Design Lab. I'm thrilled to continue teaching and exploring the liberatory potential of legal design in my home state. At the same time, I'm coming to terms with the fact that I no longer have the capacity to lead GAP in its current form.

GAP has always been a scrappy organization. A small and dedicated group of people have devoted many hours to our mission, often on a volunteer basis. Because of this, my decision to step back from my role presents an opportune moment to pause and reflect on GAP's future. Right now, GAP is on indefinite hiatus.

Our team is exploring a variety of ways to carry on GAP's mission. We might search for a new president with a passion for legal information design (know anyone?), redefine the scope of our activities, transfer our assets to a sister nonprofit, or pursue some other avenue that we haven't thought of yet. We would love to hear from you about your vision for GAP's future. How might we leverage our limited resources to keep making legal information accessible? Please share your thoughts here!

In the seven years since I founded GAP, the field of legal design has blossomed. More and more advocates are wielding creative tools to share knowledge and power with their communities. It has been GAP's great privilege to contribute to this evolution of public interest lawyering alongside all of you. I hope you'll join us in imagining what we might do next.

With gratitude,

Hallie Jay Pope
President
