

THE TIME TO INNOVATE YOUR
*WAY OF WORKING

IS NOW!

Home office has come to stay! But what does that mean for your organisation?
Unfortunately, there is no standard answer to that question. In the end it is all about defining: How do you want to communicate and collaborate in the future?
Answering that is not simple, but its consequences far-reaching. We help you to find your answer and innovate your future way of working.

How to communicate and collaborate in the future? To answer this, you need to touch upon several topics within and at the intersection of all organisational domains: people, processes and places. With our Future of Work Assessment we make sure that you pose the right questions and define the right measures:

Which mindset does your future way of working require? How do you involve your employees in this transformation journey?

Which skills and competences do you need in the future? Is your management up to the task of remote leadership?

Which processes do you need to redefine? Is your organisational structure still adequate?

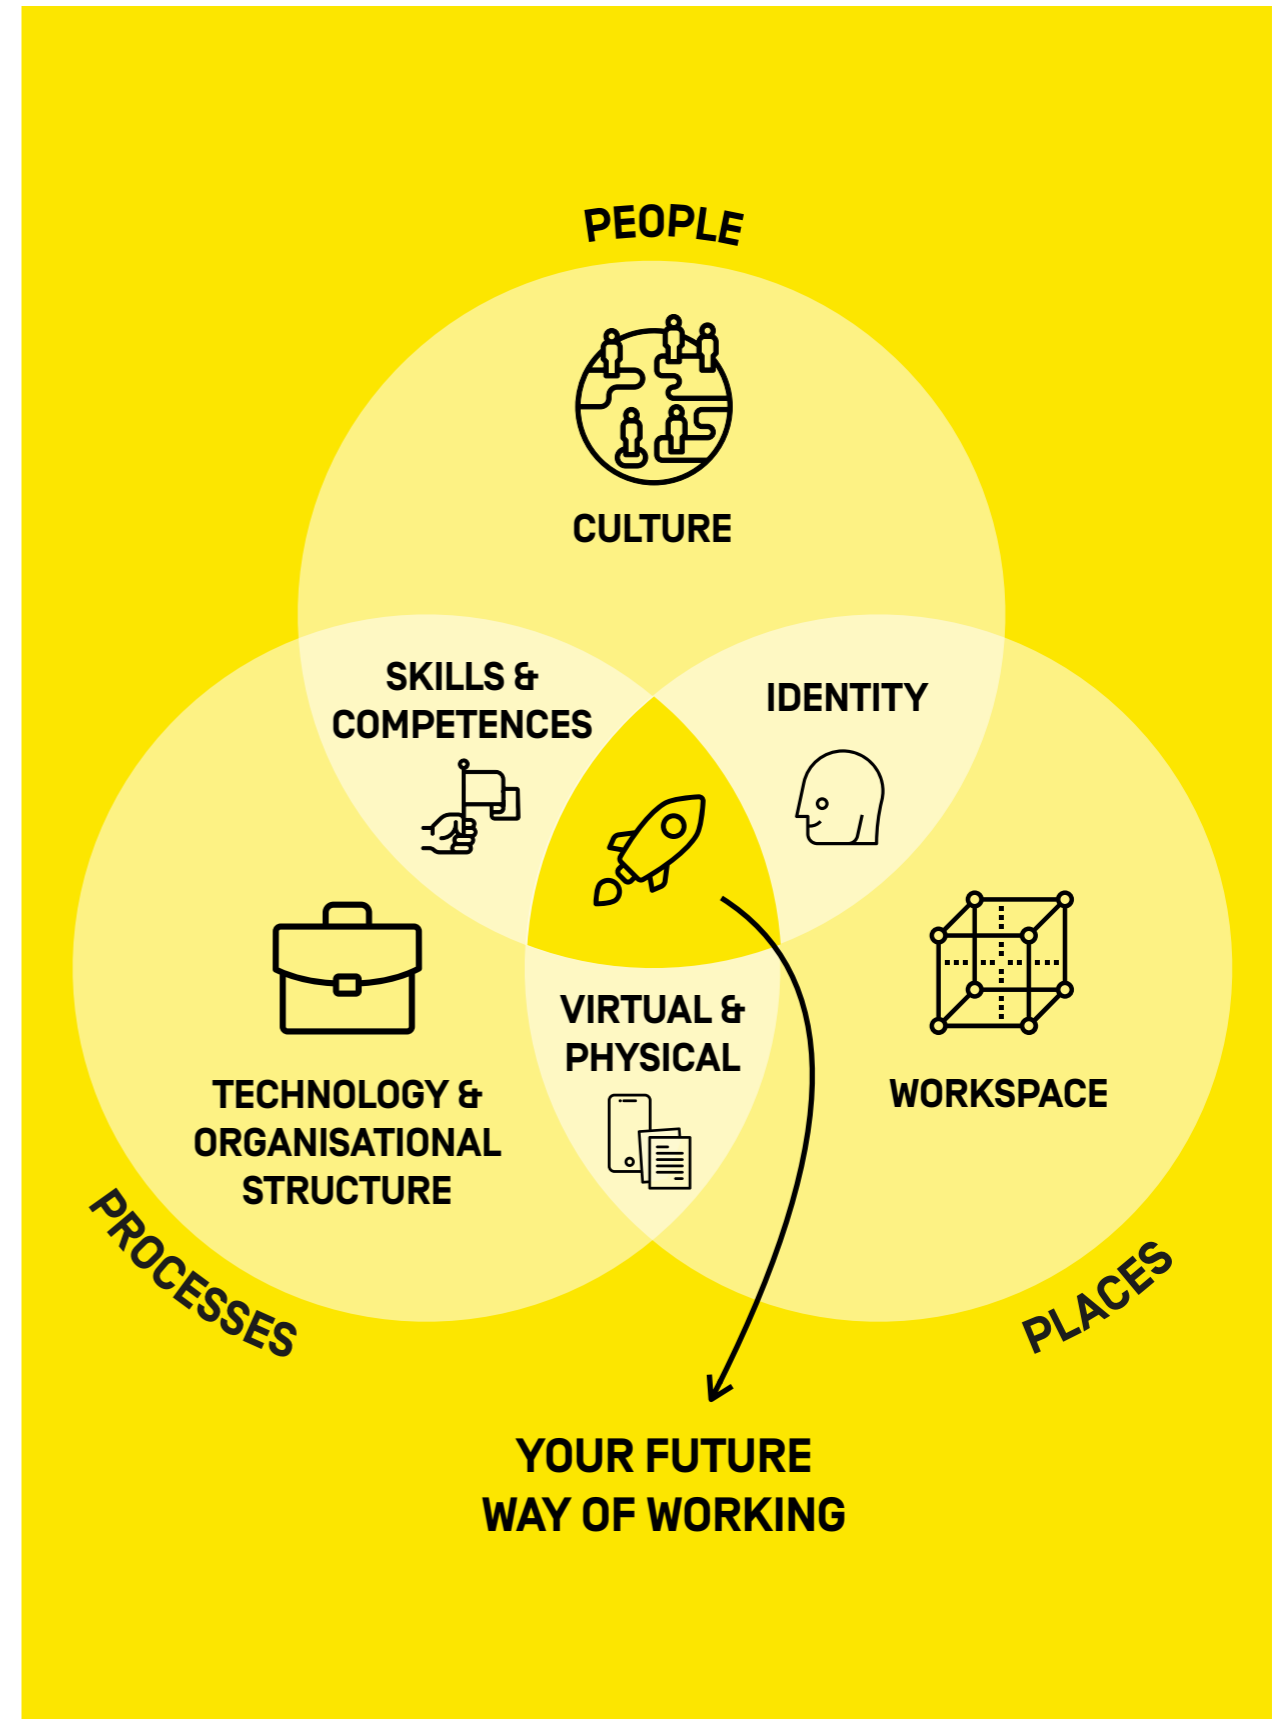

Which part of the communication and collaboration happens online and which part benefits from face-to-face interaction?

What kind of office space do you need in the future? How many m² and where?

How do you ensure that your employees feel engaged and can identify themselves with the organisation?

With our Future of Work Assessment we take you on a brief, but intense journey to innovate your future way of working. Backed with quantitative and qualitative research from within your organisation, we discuss the current transformation of work with your leadership team. From this we define a clear vision and define a roadmap with prioritised activities. Everything from organising a leadership training through setting up a new collaboration platform to redesigning your office is possible.
