

Libby Jachles

Libby Jachles As a former classroom teacher and retired literacy coach in the Brighton School District in Rochester, NY, Libby and Ruth have worked together closely for more than 20 years talking about new work, teacher needs and wants, and the most effective ways to teach writing every day. She specializes in training and coaching classroom teachers on teaching writing using the traits and modes. She's presented to, and supported teachers both nationally and internationally. Libby knows books, she knows kids, she knows teachers, and she likes to put her knowledge of all three together in her presentations. At home, a golden retriever named Winnie and friends who keep her in good wine make her days rich and wonderful.
