TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Distribution of play

He is a footballer with the capacity of distributing the play. He opens up the play well with horizontal passes, which generates possession. He passes short well, which helps with the combination play. He is also able to make vertical passes in transitions into attack.

Stepping on free spaces

He positions himself well. He makes it through the lines to close up gaps. He constantly goes back and forth, which is something that defensively helps. In addition, he is good at relaying teammates to avoid any goal chance when transitioning into defense.

Strength

He has a good biotype for his position. He is strong and uses his body well for defensive 1v1 duels. He wins ground challenges by not committing fouls, which allows him to avoid second plays. Also, he understands how important is cleaning the zone after a recovery.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Box-to-box

Saddiki can play as a central midfielder, showing up either like the one with more defensive or offensive responsibilities. It is due to his capacity of covering long distances with and off the ball while being an option of pass.

Dynamism

His role and movements off the ball are important for his dynamism. He arrives into different zones to create play. He is a footballer who positions himself on different heights both at building up from the back and lanes. He is capable of performing either centralized or on the sides.

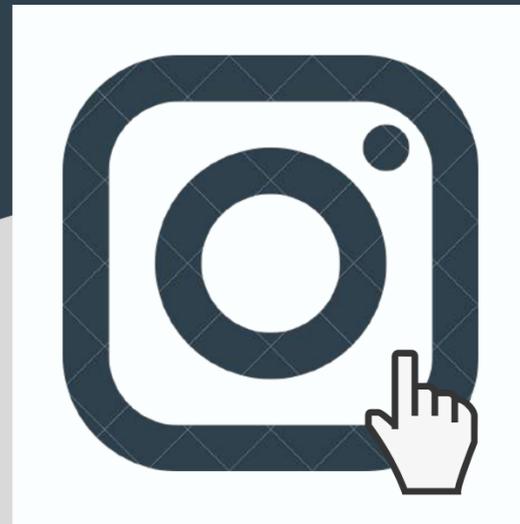

Presión

He is intense. He presses in different zones of the field. If the marking is zonal, he understands he has stay in his area. He goes for the player quick in order to regain possession. If he is overcame by the rival, he goes back as soon as the action happens. It allows him to play at different systems, mainly due to his off the ball play.
