TACTICAL ANALYSIS

TECHNICAL QUALITY

He has a great technique, both to control the ball and pass it. This quality allows him to be part of the creation and association of play. He builds-up from the back, generating breaking-line passes. He wins second balls, and then he passes to the third man. He is able to make through the line passes.

QUALITY CROSSES

He gets into attack well. He does it by driving until the end line to accurately make a cross. He has a great timing and kicking technique to make it right to his teammates. He is a fullback who puts forward in play in the box. He makes good lateral crosses.

POLYVALENCE

He is capable of adapting to different contexts, system and ideas of play. In the upper image, he plays as a centre-back, even though his natural position is right-back. He is smart to cover various positions on the field and accomplish it both defensively and offensively.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

1V1 DEFENSIVE DUELS

Although he is not that aggressive in defensive duels, he is effective to individually win the duel. He has two ways of winning the ball: 1. by anticipating the ball with his good positioning of play. 2. In 1v1 actions, he is patient to get the ball back to him.

AERIAL DUELS

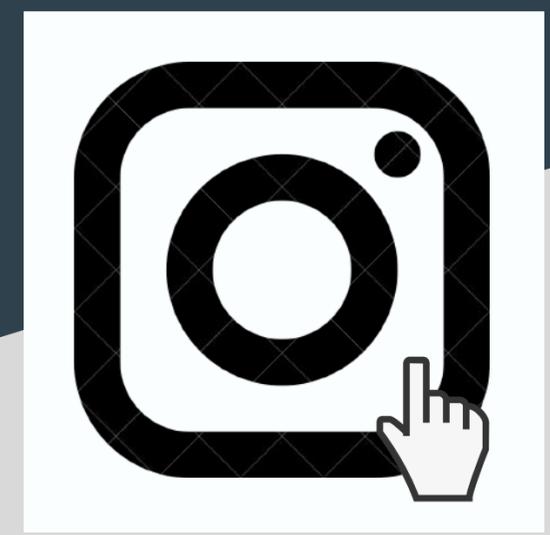

He jumps high. He understands how to use his good aerial play in the different positions he can play. He is not that tall (1.79cm), but he knows how to use his body to displace the rival and then regain it. Also, he gives a hand in defensive set pieces by marking on the rival's reference player.

SMART TO PLAY

He is smart to position himself on the field. He shows up to relays teammates in behind them, which makes him a good player to retreat into shape. He understands how to move his body to get to the ball with advantage. He runs short distances due to his great location before the action.
