TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Aerial play

Due to his height, he is a footballer who jumps high and wins many aerial duels. In goal kick situations, he is a key player to avoid a second ball since he usually gets it and makes a long clearance to refuse any possible attack. Also, he has a good timing for diagonal passes and lateral crosses.

Associative play

In Europe and more in a team such as Juventus, centre-backs have to play combinative. They constantly build-up from the back and help the team create play in different heights and lanes. Dragusin knows how to show up in various zones of the field to become an option of pass and keep the possession of the ball.

Breaking-line pass

In addition to the last explanation and even though he is young, he is capable of taking risks to play vertically. He is able to assume leadership and generate gaps while driving the ball or sending long to a teammate.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

Positional intelligence

Dragusin has smart tactical movements. He understands either when to tackle or drop back. Regarding situations when he has to switch markings in and out the box, he makes it greatly. He positions well in lateral crosses and never gets away from the player he is marking on.

Defensive 1v1

He is a footballer with great defensive 1v1 conditions. He has a strong biotype. He knows how to put his back and hold the rival in order to unbalance him and recover the ball. Also, he wins a big amount of frontal duels because of his timing and decision making accuracy to deal with rivals, either if going to the sides or anticipating.

Long passes

He has a good long-range pass. It can be a good way to play directly. Most of the time, he attracts rivals to play long or move the rival's defense to create gaps. He knows when his teammate is going to make a diagonal run in behind the defenders.
