TACTICAL ANALYSIS

SHORT ASSOCIATION

He possesses good associative resources, becoming an ideal player to advance on the sides through inside and outside movements, as well as passing short and moving into space. He establishes socio-affective relationships and his mobility generates superiorities in attack, which allows him to dynamize situations and find out spaces to finish.

CLEARANCES AND INTERCEPTIONS

He has good defensive reading of play, watching out his environment and markers to know how and when defend. In addition, he makes good decisions when intercepting and making clearances. He is not a player who looks for to be exposed, but controls his movements very well to avoid be overcome.

INSIDE PLAY

He has an especial tend to play inside, which allows him to switch direction when driving the ball and facing offensive 1v1 duels in the associative circuit. He can go forward by inside to after play inside and outside unmarks in behind of the defenders. Also, he frequently drives the ball to the middle, attracting players and turning around to decongest the sides.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

PROGRESSIVE PASSES

Every time he got chances, he connects with a player in between lines or being free, showing a good quantity of ideal mechanical progressive passes (he just needs short time and space to make them). His gestures make him unpredictable (his rivals do not identify his intention easy). He often accompanies the plays to be part of them and dynamize the circuit.

AGGRESSIVENESS

He is an aggressive player to mark on rivals, mostly when they are receiving with his back to the goal. However, he avoids to make careless fouls and make premature decisions to lose his back. He does not use his arms to control the rival, but he positions his low body to prevent a turn from the rival and make him lose possession.

CROSSES

He has good crossing concepts, having predilection by exploding the grid number 15 when going forward, crossing and finding out best and possibilities of shooting. This type of crosses is more difficult to read by the goalkeeper. His crosses are classic and with inside spin. He can also cross with no space and hit it flat to find out a shooter into the box.
