TACTICAL ANALYSIS

BUILDING-UP

He drops back to be part of the build-up phase, which allows the centre-backs to spread out and the fullbacks to go up to produce width. He seems to be calmed when collectively advance. He does not give up under pressure nor tries difficult and risky passes. He quickly detects teammates near him to pass in short and keeping the possession.

CAPACITY OF CORRECTING

He is a footballer who take risks in defensive phase due to his capacity of correction. His physical shape allows him to make quick and long runs every match. This is the reason why running toward the goal is easy for him. He anticipates without being noticed.

DYNAMIC MOBILITY

He is constantly moving smartly to choose where to be at. He frequently tries to generate superiority on the side, going to support teammates and making outside triangles to advance either into the inside or outside zone. He usually plays one-two, but when having time after screening his environment, he decides to play at fist touch to dynamize the association.

TACTICAL ANALYSIS

SHORT AND MEDIUM PASSES

His passing range depends on how safe is the pass he tries because the majority of them are short or medium passes to give the receiver enough time and space to receive. He shows composure to play, failing just a few times. He transmits this confidence to his teammates. Also, he is capable of managing the tempo of play to secure quality.

DEFENSIVE 1V1 DUELS

His low center of gravity makes him steady to deal with 1v1 duels. Also, he leverages his body positioning with quick movements to get to the ball before the attacker. He reads rival's gestures well, guessing where to go to defend. His recovering technique is clean and his timing makes him to not need much fight on 1v1 duels.

SUPPORTS

He enters in play in small-side spaces with mental agility to get the most he can, by supporting on the side or positioning himself in front of the confrontation line to complete walls or pass. His game is simple (not often tries something out of his regular basis), but he is extremely fast and intelligent. He takes just a few risks and tries to associate with short passes to move the rival's block in order to generate free spaces.
