Press release

The Académie des Métiers de la Diplomatie is pleased to announce the launch of its new online training program 2021/2022

The Académie des Métiers de la Diplomatie, the official successor of the Académie Diplomatique Internationale, is launching its new online training program as from June 2021.

As part of its strategic development plan, the digitalization of its activities aims not only to introduce innovative training methods and reaffirm its values of excellence, but also to strengthen the development and outreach of its diplomatic training program and to make it accessible to a wider audience.

These professional courses, designed for diplomats, international civil servants, and executives from public and private sectors, are fully adapted to current developments and practices of diplomatic careers, and more broadly, of all professions requiring skills in international field.

The e-learning instruction, provided in a flexible format compatible with professional work schedule, is based on the following main features:

- The acquisition of practical knowledge and skills
- The sharing of professional experience and best practices
- The participation of a core faculty supplemented by guest speakers, including eminent diplomats and outstanding academics and experts.

The Academy is devoted to assisting its public in a policy of professional capacity-building throughout their career, in order to consolidate their skills, acquire new ones, and ensure a rewarding career, via the following series of training provided in French and English:

- Protocol and Diplomatic Practice
- Diplomacy as Profession
- International Negotiation
- Crisis Management
- Media and Diplomacy
- Pre-posting Seminar (for diplomats newly accredited in France)
- Diplomatic French course
- Diplomatic English course

This new online training programme will be welcoming its first applicants as from June 2021 and will complement the in-person courses.
