The Office is

The way we work has changed—catapulted how we lived and worked when challenged by a pandemic. Work is happening in more than one location—from an integrated ecosystem with three space types: office, home, and third places.

the Hub

Many of us missed the office and all the ways it keeps us connected—especially through our unique company cultures and collaboration with coworkers. To support the new hybrid model for working in person and remotely, leaders will likely need to rethink the floorplate to accommodate what employees want: the best work experience regardless of space.

Purposeful workplace design results in the right mix of spaces that help people do their best work. It should incorporate variety and choice with a balance of open and enclosed spaces to support both collaborative and focused activities. Embracing a variety of workstyles and activities unlocks creativity and innovation in people, which drives employee engagement.

In the Work from Anywhere ecosystem, the office is the hub: It’s a destination for culture, connection, and collaboration. It’s no wonder the fastest growing collaborative spaces are Social Spaces—which are flexible, communal, and inspiring—so people can pause, gather, connect, and restore.

Designing for collaboration helps create an environment where employees feel valued for their unique perspective—and Social Spaces will enrich their experience. Open areas can be optimized using adjacent freestanding architecture. Access to outdoor views offers restoration and recovery, balancing technology with nature. Creating boundaries helps reduce unwanted noise for better focus while still being able to stay connected with colleagues.

These spaces support the casual, social interactions that build and nurture relationships, which many people have craved since the pandemic began. Taking a break to socialize with colleagues in comfortable furnishings increases people’s happiness. From the lighting to the accessories—collaborative Social Spaces enhance the experience for everyone, with a soft, inviting aesthetic to promote well-being and energize team dynamics.

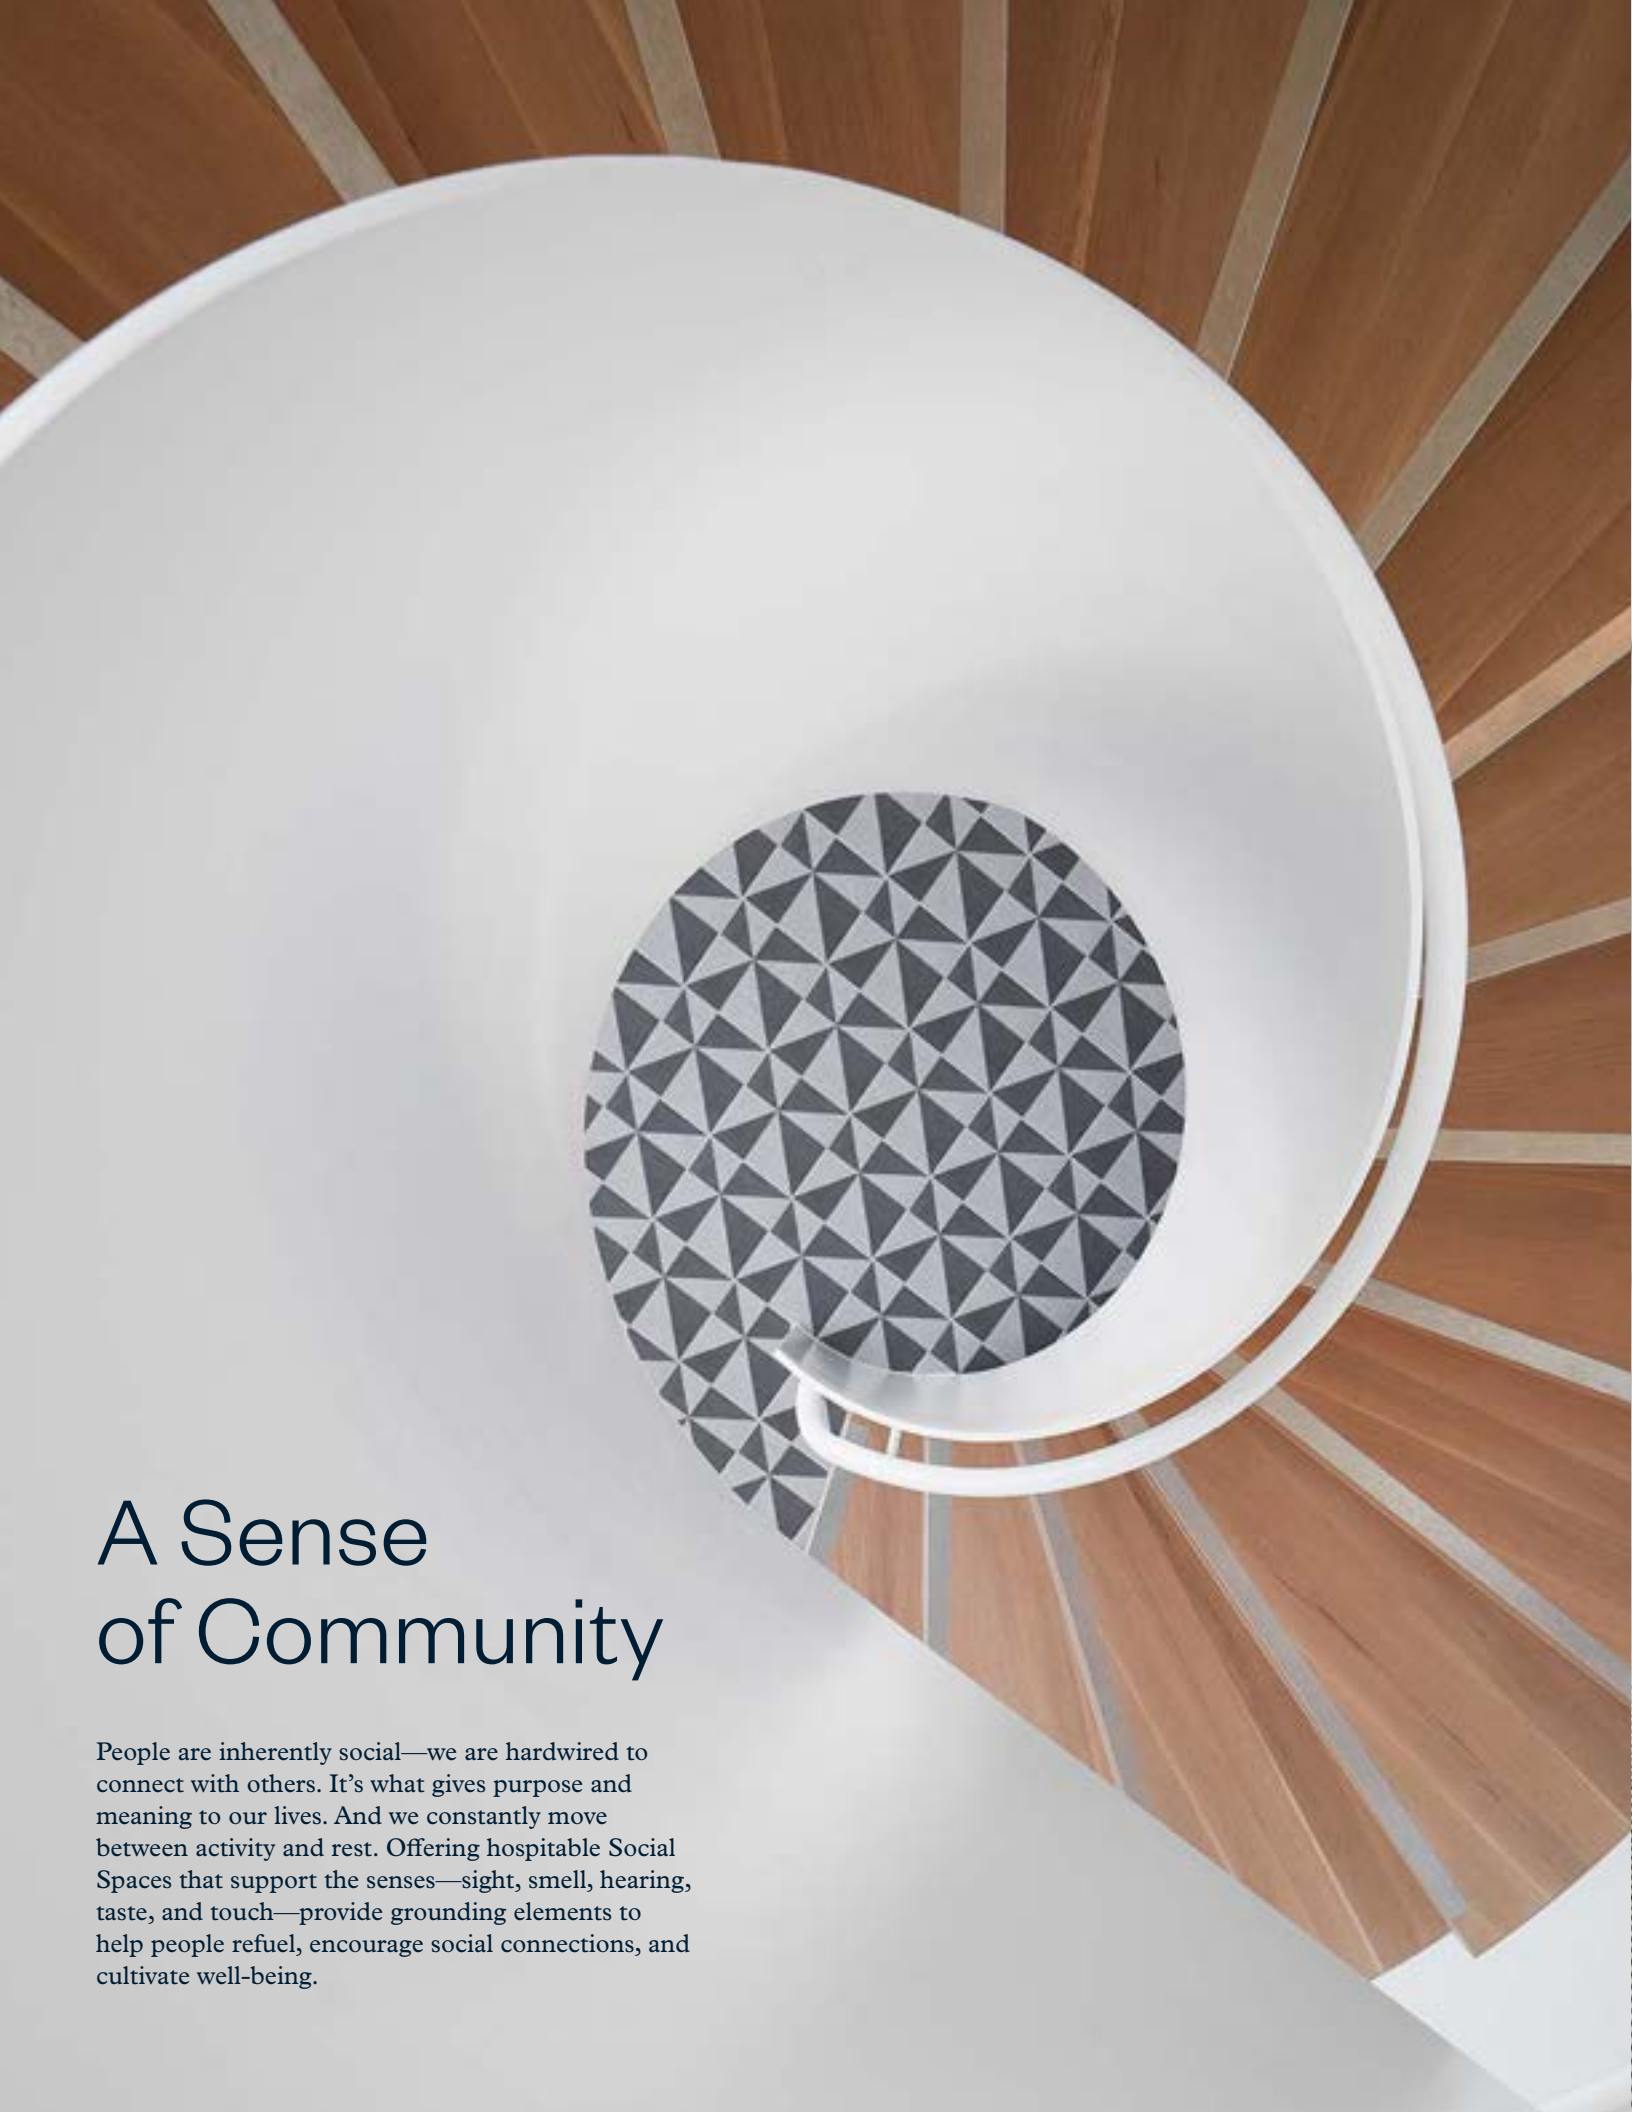

Bringing the outside in makes us feel better, connects us with nature, and fosters well-being.

Creativity flourishes when people can control their space with flexible furnishings that encourage connection and face-to-face interaction. Thoughtfully designed spaces are important to shift behaviors or adopt a new culture—specifically to support the agility of people coming together—whether for listening, brainstorming, meeting, or socializing.

A Sense of Community

People are inherently social—we are hardwired to connect with others. It's what gives purpose and meaning to our lives. And we constantly move between activity and rest. Offering hospitable Social Spaces that support the senses—sight, smell, hearing, taste, and touch—provide grounding elements to help people refuel, encourage social connections, and cultivate well-being.

The hospitality market continues to influence organizations to offer personalized, authentic experiences that make a first (and lasting) impression for both customers and employees. We transferred knowledge of hospitality in the workplace to create an inviting place for customers to stay when they visit our headquarters. The Haworth Hotel is more than lodging—it's also a third place for our community.

When you walk into the hotel lobby, you can't miss the grand spiral staircase that connects the first two floors of the building. Then, choose from a variety of Social Spaces to meet, read, chat, or wait in common areas that create an inviting environment for work and relaxation. Warm, welcoming lounge spaces feature the best of Haworth's global product offering from Cassina, Cappellini, Poltrona Frau, and JANUS et Cie. A coffee bar and café are just steps away, along with touchdown workspaces to accommodate quiet time alone.

Formerly known as the Haworth Inn & Conference Center in Holland, Michigan, the Haworth Hotel underwent extensive transformation to provide our customers with opportunities to engage with our product solutions in a living hospitality environment. Located on the campus of Hope College, the hotel serves a wide audience with multiple spaces. It was designed to foster interactions among Hope College staff and students, community members, and visitors to our global headquarters.

A blend of Haworth products in the hotel's common areas provides training and breakout spaces, and combination meeting and dining areas.

In the warm, welcoming spaces, a variety of elements—lighting by Pablo Designs, rugs by GAN, and textiles by Kvadrat—contribute to the ambience. Outdoor spaces also provide alternative places for groups to restore and connect.

Haworth partnered with Patricia Urquiola and her Milan-based studio to create this signature luxury hotel that blends international design with local charm—Urquiola’s first hospitality project in North America. Studio Urquiola’s extensive experience in retail, product, and hospitality design brings an internationally recognizable ability to balance warmth, playfulness, sophistication, and multiple brand experiences. “We had the possibility for a kind of playground to show all of the furniture, the ideas, and the research we have done with the Haworth group,” says Urquiola.

With 48 guestrooms, including a suite and 14 conference spaces, the Haworth Hotel is a blend of residential and commercial solutions—durable enough to withstand years of accommodating guests and with a vibe that feels like home.

Emeco

Turn it into what will last. This is the principle on which American furniture maker Emeco was founded in 1944. Emeco continues this philosophy today by exploring and innovating ways to use consumer and industrial waste, and environmentally responsible resources. The result: simple, timeless furniture that sits lightly on the planet.

For Emeco—one of our newest Haworth Collection partners—owning their impact on the planet is not new—it’s in their DNA. In fact, around 90% of their entire product range is made from recycled materials. Back in 1944, they started with scrap aluminum when they created the first Navy chair for—you guessed it—the US Navy. Today there’s a lot more to reclaim. All their product materials have been carefully selected to have the least possible environmental impact—most are reclaimed or recycled. All are chosen for longevity.

Most of Emeco’s products are produced by hand, with techniques passed down over generations. At their factory in Hanover, Pennsylvania, craftsmen turn scrap aluminum into chairs so strong they guarantee them for life. Cutting, bending, stamping, forming, welding, grinding, heat treating, hand brushing, anodizing—these are just a few of the 77 steps it takes to make their products, which are thoughtfully curated to feature responsibly sourced and recycled materials.

Waste that would otherwise end up in the landfill is often used and reused to create functional yet timeless products, like the 111 Navy chair that was made from recycled plastic bottles, in partnership with Coca-Cola.

Emeco works with the world’s best designers and many of the names you’ll find in the Haworth portfolio—including Jasper Morrison, Philippe Starck, Nendo, and Barber & Osgerby—to make timeless products, built to last. “We know we cannot solve all the world’s problems by making chairs,” says Alev Oztas, Emeco President & CEO. “But our goal is to inspire others, set an example how things can be done more appropriately to solve some of the world’s problems today.”

By manufacturing in the US and sourcing as locally as possible, Emeco helps preserve skills and craftsmanship—and supports the local economy. It also reduces CO<sub>2</sub> emissions from transportation. Which is why Emeco is an ideal partner for Haworth and a recent addition to Haworth Collection. Our shared values of sustainability, craftsmanship, design, and durability make Emeco a natural fit for the Haworth brand portfolio—increasing the breadth of choice for hospitality and Social Spaces, both indoors and out. “With our common values, hand-in-hand together with Haworth,” says Oztas, “I believe we can reach out to more people, inspire them to run their businesses more sustainably, and hopefully add value to both Haworth and their clients’ businesses.”

Philippe Starck is a French inventor, creator, architect, designer, and artistic director with an acute awareness toward ecological implications, enthusiasm for imagining new lifestyles, love of ideas, and concern with defending the intelligence of usefulness. From everyday products like furniture and lemon squeezers to revolutionary mega-yachts, space module habitation, vibrant hotels, and the miraculous technologies of electric cars and bikes, he never stops pushing the limits and criteria of contemporary design. Starck is a true visionary who brings together the art of innovation, democratic design, and ecology to benefit both humans and nature.

Philippe Starck

An Object Must Be Useful Before Being Beautiful

We interviewed Starck to understand what drives his creativity and innovation, which manifested into a rich career with over 10,000 designs. It begins with a vision: Creation, whatever form it takes, must improve the lives of as many people as possible.

Haworth: When and why did you decide to become a designer?

Starck: I was never interested in design; it is a job that chose me and, because I am a coward, I simply accepted it. It was my DNA.

My father was an aeronautical engineer and I learned under his drawing table that for a plane to fly, first you have to create it, and for it to fly you have to be rigorous. There is a logic in my work, a rigor and a desire to talk about something else, to give objects a voice. I have this mental sickness called creativity and I work with intuitions that are verified and constructed. I always remain at the center, at the core of things.

Then I remember my mother, a very pretty woman, a woman of panache. She was very elegant, very funny, very imaginative, very inventive. It is the “panache,” the feminine beauty of being able to transform everything into a dream.

So, I try to bring my creativity, my rigor, and add a kind of general humor about life. In this useless world that design is—as it does not save lives—I do my best to suggest solutions to issues I have identified.

Haworth: Can you speak about your democratic design philosophy and how it influenced your creation of objects that are both attainable and well-designed?

Starck: A long time ago, I invented this concept of democratic design, that is increasing quality—through industrialization—while decreasing the price in order to make it accessible to the greatest number, because when I started, design was elitist. There were beautiful pieces, very costly, made for the very happy few. I hate elitism, and I could not accept that a family had to pay $10,000 to have dinner with their children. That is why I have fought all my life to take the “zeroes” off of everything.

Now, we can say that almost everybody can afford a high-quality design chair for $50. Democratic design is not a style. It is a humanism that aims to increase quality in every respect—cultural, qualitative, technological—to lower the price and to share it with as many people as possible. I would much rather make a million proposals at $1 each, than make one proposal at $1 million. But there are great people everywhere and why choose if you can work for all.

I have a strategy called “Robin Hood.” I do not steal, but I use these million-dollar projects as advanced research laboratories where I can develop and experiment with new high technologies, new environmentally friendly materials, which are eventually used for mass market products.

Haworth: How has dematerialization influenced your design of objects?

Starck: I have been a pioneer of dematerialization for more than 50 years. Since always, I have had this idea to fight materiality and its vulgarity, which is a paradox because I have been producing materiality. Only the project is elegant, only the dream is elegant.

Dematerialization is the course of history and also the future. At birth, everybody signed a contract with their community. The contract can have different faces, but the base is that everybody has a duty to help their society, their civilization, their animal species.

Designers cannot save lives, but they have a duty to answer questions and find solutions to make obligatory objects bearable. There is not a big future for design like it is today, because dematerialization will be almost completed in less than 20 years. Like the economy, ecology will necessarily remove the superfluous from us. There will not be the possibility of having objects for nothing, because spending energy and matter tomorrow for nothing will not be more acceptable and will be prohibited.

When everything will be dematerialized, there are no more reasons to make design. The smartest ones will understand that a designer is not obliged to produce materiality, they can produce pure service. That is the future of design.

Haworth: How has this approach influenced your work with Cassina and Emeco?

Starck: The idea is to produce less and have more. Cassina is the Italian aristocracy of design and Emeco is the Californian pragmatic intelligence. These companies embody the idea of longevity, timelessness, quality, and creativity, in a way that does not exist anywhere else.

All this can seem a little bit old but it is not old, it is ultra-modern, because today one of the most modern parameters is longevity. To build not for one year, not for five years, for a life, for two lives or five generations. Less matter, less energy for more service and durability. Sustainability is not a choice, it’s an urgency. I am completely involved in this.

Haworth: What’s been your greatest challenge as a designer?

Starck: Trying to provide opportunities for everyone to be at their best everywhere at anytime.

Haworth: What are you passionate about in life that influences your creativity and innovation?

Starck: I don’t have any influences because I don’t go out, I don’t watch TV, I don’t listen to anyone, and I don’t understand anything. What I love is us, our genius. We are extraordinary animals of intelligence. I love and admire the most beautiful specimens of human intelligence, such as the great scientists—especially from the beginning of science—like Eratosthenes and Plato. Those who, with a camel, a well, a 30-centimeter stick, were able to measure—with only a 4% error—the size of the Earth.

Then after the great masters are the great teachers, like Victor Hugo, who teach you everything about everything. I am crazy about our evolution. I watch it, I analyze it, I scrutinize it, I try to predict it, I try to understand it. It is the fertile soil on which I work, as creation is obviously something based on evolution.

“If there is no vision, humane, social, or loving, a project doesn’t have the legitimacy to exist.”

Green

is the New Black

Recent changes in our lifestyles have given people the opportunity to think more about their environments—not just their work settings, but the world around us—reinvigorating a push toward circular design. Yet Haworth has been focused on making the world better for a long time. Design thinking permeates everything we do. We are committed to optimizing resources through a closed-loop system with no waste—without sacrificing design principles—for a sustainable future.

In 2022, we introduced three award-winning fabrics: Scapes, Novelty, and Hobson. Repurposed, recycled, biodegradable—whatever sustainable fabric you choose, upcycling is both responsible and beautiful, offering a wide range of colorways and choices in sophisticated design.

Scapes

is as beautiful up close as it is from afar. The organic matelassé design, inspired by nature, captures light and shadow, while adding dimension and warmth to products and space. Variation and intricacies in the weave detail create a bas-relief effect—as if the surface is emerging. Part of the CLEAN IMPACT TEXTILES™ Biodegradable★ line, Scapes is a proprietary, “leave-no-trace” solution with a compelling eco story: 91% biodegradation in 1,278 days.

*91% biodegradation in 1,278 days under ASTM D5511 conditions. No evidence of further degradation.

16 colorways, graded for seating and systems furnishings

Novelty

Inspired by classic boucle fabrics that span residential and commercial uses, Novelty’s highly textural surface was designed to showcase new yarn developments.

The art and balance of a looping yarn with a classic weave results in this textural, upscale classic. In its construction, Novelty employs a fancy boucle yarn. The plush yarn lends an organic quality to the otherwise structural dobby weave. The result is a non-directional pattern, juxtaposed with heavy and fine yarn weights in the warp and fill, which contributes to the fabric’s versatility in a variety of applications. Adding to its unique design, Novelty brings sustainability benefits too. Nearly half of its content comes from REPREEVE® recycled fiber, which means 17 plastic bottles per yard are diverted from landfill. Novelty has it all—timeless appeal and sustainability for upholstery that lasts.

24 colorways ranging from soft light neutrals to saturated hues, suitable for upholstery and vertical surfaces

Hobson

This proprietary fabric is made with 80% ocean bound plastic and post-consumer recycled polyester. Half of this content comes from REPREEVE® Our Ocean®, an initiative that ensures plastic never enters the ocean. Plastic bottles are collected within 50 kilometers of waterways or coastal areas. The waste is sorted and cleaned; then extruded into new fibers, premium yarns, and fabric. The process breathes new life into recycled materials and diverts 33 plastic bottles per yard of Hobson fabric from ever getting into the sea. Using fibers made from ocean bound plastic is one way Haworth provides sustainable fabrics that help improve our environment.

Inspiration for Hobson came from blending an old Scottish herringbone pattern typically seen in vintage menswear with new yarn technology, evoking classic suiting and sophisticated settings in a material that is truly timeless.

26 colorways, with a nod to classic neutrals that push new color trends and saturated color
