"I remember Woodwork at school - it's pretty easy, isn't it?"
 - Minerva Coulter

From the Chair

'DESIGN + WOOD 2007: an exhibition of contemporary studio furniture' opens on 14 August as part of this years "Sydney Design" festival. The exhibition revives the long history of Association exhibitions and our (now formalised) aim of promoting fine woodwork. (Members voted in favour of the special resolutions to change the Objects and Rules of the Association at the last general meeting.)

All members and supporters of the Association are welcome to the opening of Design + Wood at 6- 8 PM on Tuesday 14 August. Robert Bell, Senior Curator of Decorative Arts and Design at Australian National Gallery will give the opening address.

Thanks to everyone who contributed to the exhibition - especially Cath Fogarty (Co-ordinator), Leon Sadubin, Tracy Gumm and Rob Chapman. We are extremely grateful to our sponsors who have made the exhibition possible; Forests NSW, The Gordon Darling Foundation, Australian Woodwork Gallery, Naturally, Allwood Timbers, Anagote Woodworks, Trend Timbers, Carba-Tec, Livos and Mother of Pearl.

Quite independently of the Association, Australian Wood Review and Bungendore Woodworks have also named their competition/ exhibition "Studio Furniture". The AWR competition has the full support of the Association and members are encouraged to enter.

A revival in Studio/ Workshop Production?

We still have a long way to go to regaining public awareness and appreciation of woodwork and studio production but the signs are very encouraging. There is a gathering momentum in public recognition of craft based studio production in many traditional "crafts" with the aid of modern technology in design and application. However the word "craft"- which has fallen spectacularly out of favour - may not be part of the revival.

The 'Smart Works: design and the handmade' symposium at the Powerhouse Museum triggered my optimistic about a revival in a positive attitude to hand made objects. David Day, a presenter on business affairs for the BBC, gave a helicopter view of how he saw the "new capitalism" developing - with reaction to the high volume generic production, and response to global warming, opening opportunities for local production, uniqueness of products with lower production/ higher margins. Technology is also allowing small-scale businesses to demand the attention of the market.

Many of the speakers remained committed to keeping at least part of their production to unique items and limited production in recognition of the opportunities for market differentiation offered by small scale production, environmental concerns and their own personal satisfaction.

The revival of studio based courses in making is predictable as the internet impact on an increasing interest in books

Another sign of a revival in craft based production is the reported Australia-wide increased demand for studio craft programs in university art schools. Craft Arts International No 70 has an article by Associate Professor Ross Woodrow of the Queensland College of Art in which he explores the stigma which developed around "craft" and the renewed interest in making in studio based courses. Interestingly he says the revival is "predictable as the internet impact on an increasing interest in books" because only non-material information can be transmitted in the internet and the more information transmitted the more people want to experience the material form.

The more concrete proof of renewed public appreciation and preparedness to seek out individual makers is the feedback from professional members. Most report increased interest and sizeable orders. There is a confidence that didn't exist even a few years ago.

Looking forward to seeing you at Danks Street Waterloo on 14 August.

Cheers

Warwick Wright

Brush the Dust Off and find the woodie below By David Hire

Yes—brush the dust off and find the woodie—probably lying on the workshop floor somewhere! We'll let David tell you in his own words, why there is no regular interview for this issue.....

This month I don't have an interview for you. Muggins managed to fall down two steps stone cold sober. As a result I have a broken leg, broken ankle and multiple breaks in the foot. So far its has been eight weeks with another four before I can put any weight on it. Hence I now have a particular interest in how level the ground is.

in Popular Mechanics May 2007 issue about illegal logging and the Forrest Stewardship Council (FSC). If you can't find the issue you can go to "popularmechanics.com/timberracket".

I was surprised to see Merbau listed. Especially as I want to build a small deck out of it. Any suggestions for an alternative?

Australian Wood Review has had several articles on timber issues including one in issue 48 (Sept. 05) about FSC in Australia.

Happy Service,

I have been catching up on my reading and came across an article David Hire

LIVOS & TIMBER

the perfect combination

The Kunos Natural Oil Sealer from Livos is not only effective, it is also a healthier and more environmentally friendly timber finishing option. The organically sourced linseed oil penetrates the upper layers of the timber whilst the natural plant resins and waxes aid in creating a hard wearing moisture barrier.

The reasons why Neil Scobie uses and recommends the Kunos oil is.....“We like Kunos Oil for a few reasons, firstly it is completely non toxic so there are no health problems like with using lacquers. Secondly it brings out the natural colour of the timber where as some oils that contain mineral turps retard the natural colour of the timber. Thirdly it is dead set easy to use; any one can achieve a good finish if they follow a few simple instructions.” -Neil Scobie, Professional Woodturner, Cabinetmaker, Demonstrator and Teacher

With the transparent Kunos oil the natural colour and grain of the timber is highlighted without the plastic coating of the standard synthetic oils and varnishes. The easy to apply Kunos oil is also available in various stains, is very economical to use and is suitable for many purposes such as toys, furniture, benches, doors and even floors. For long lasting and functional surfaces, Livos offers a complete range of products that take your health into consideration.

Kunos is manufactured by Livos in Germany, the first industrial manufacturer of Ecological oils and paints world wide. These oils have been used successfully on Australian timbers over the last 2 decades and are available throughout Australia. Livos uses only renewable raw materials and all ingredients are openly declared. See www.livos.com.au & www.neilandlizscobie.com for more details.

Design + Wood 2007 promises to be the most significant event for the NSW Woodworkers' Association for a number of years. The exhibitors, the exhibition committee and Warwick Wright in particular have put an enormous effort into organizing this exhibition. Behind the scenes Cath Fogarty has put in a stirling effort as has David Factor with the artwork but much of the thanks must go to our generous sponsors without whom this could not have happened.

DEPOT1 & DEPOT2 GALLERIES WATERLOO

Depot I and Depot II galleries are exhibition spaces in the Danks Street Galleries complex. Danks Street is a popular street in Waterloo bordering on Surry Hills with galleries, cafés and specialty stores. The space consists of two adjoining galleries divided by a passageway. The total floor space is approximately 160 square metres. The Danks Street Depot Galleries are a prestige location, visited by serious collectors. There are 9 galleries in the complex and visitors to one are attracted to see all the exhibitions, this is especially the case on the opening nights of each exhibit. <http://www.2danksstreet.com.au/>

The Timber and Working with Wood Show 2007

The Timber and Working with wood show for 2007 has been and gone. The weather wasn't the kindest and that showed in the drop in the number of visitors to the show and subsequently to our stand. This also affected our raffle ticket sales but nevertheless, it was still a success. We must thank most sincerely our sponsors and also the people who supported us by buying raffle tickets. Winners of the raffle were:

The gallery competition run largely by the various clubs was a success with one of our own members, Alex McDowell being a major prizewinner.

Like other association members, Tracy Gumm was an entrant in the Gallery competition

Seminars were well received and a lot of interest was shown in our stand.

And of course there were Miko's Monsters, much to the delight of the children. Her climbing koalas were a success this year as they were last year.

George was actually guarding all of the gallery entries but we suspect that the model ships had priority!

This beautiful, carved chess set was a raffle prize on the Carvers' stand.

Paul Smyth's ying and yang design table was the winner of the Les Miller Young Achiever Award sponsored by our association.

Veneercraft of Padstow

We recently learned of the destruction by fire of long time supporter Frank Kletzmayer's wonderful premises in Padstow. This is a real blow to all of us but particularly to Frank and our heart goes out to him.

At this point, we don't know what the future hold for Frank and his business and what his intentions are. We will keep you informed when we know.

Once again, Frank, our commiserations and the members of the Association hope that the future brightens for you.

Studio furniture is one-of-a-kind or limited edition work, usually made in the workshop or factory of an individual designer/maker. Not mass produced, these works are individually designed and made.

The maker's philosophy and lifestyle are reflected in the sourcing and selection of materials, and in the construction and finish of the work.

Studio furniture is functional but it is also art because it is concerned with form, colour, tone and surfaces which are arranged to provoke a feeling or response. A variety or combination of materials may be used.
