Message from the Founder & Executive Director

"Within its first year, SWIFF has grown from a local idea to an international movement empowering 12,100 young artists in 120 countries."

As long as I can remember, I have been mesmerized by the magic of storytelling. At age 11, I created my first film, “The Lighthouse” (2017). It highlighted my teacher who guided his students to success, just as a lighthouse guides ships in the darkness. In the following years, I created three additional films focused on education and social impact.

The power of storytelling is incredible. Stories have the power to transform perspectives, connect people, and inspire change. However, as a Ukrainian filmmaker, I have learned that not all storytellers have equal opportunities to share their voices. Young and low-income filmmakers are hindered by submission fees at film festivals, and often, young BIPOC (Black, Indigenous, and People of Color) filmmakers struggle with limited resources and discrimination due to race, ethnicity, gender, and other marginalized identities.

To address these inequalities, I created the Student World Impact Film Festival (SWIFF), a global film festival that celebrates the power of film to create positive change by showcasing student voices from marginalized communities. SWIFF celebrates diverse films with impactful messages from young storytellers by streaming films live to global audiences during the festival.

"Thank you, SWIFF, [for] being [the] first-ever platform for my film to be showcased to the world. [It] has really changed the look of people [in my village] towards me as a filmmaker. Those who knew about my film being nominated for [SWIFF] now contact me for gigs... it has created trust among some of the producers, directors, and other filmmakers in me. Before SWIFF, it was really hard for someone to call me to work, but now, producers are calling me to work with them... I will always submit my film to SWIFF as long as it's still there, and this time it has inspired me to submit a feature film."

"After submitting to so many festivals and getting rejected, I was beginning to become discouraged. I started to lose some of my motivation and creativity. When SWIFF reached out to me, they brought my filmmaking spark back! They truly understood my creative vision like none else had. Their feedback made me want to work even harder on the next film."

“Coming from a low-income family... filmmakers in situations similar to mine often find themselves on a struggle against the odds: there are not enough national festivals to gather half of all Brazilian students' works... It is very empowering to have our film selected and to be a part of such an interesting international showcase, as we often struggle...”

Future Goals

Since its inception in May 2022, the Student World Impact Film Festival has embarked on a year-long journey of growth. SWIFF’s vision is to create a future where every young artist flourishes through an inclusive platform for showcasing their craft. Guided by this purpose, SWIFF aims to grow through the following avenues:

Expand Partnership with Amazon Prime Video

SWIFF has successfully distributed one film through its partnership with Prime Video. To empower more young storytellers with a global platform, SWIFF aims to distribute an additional ten films during the 2023-24 term.

Host SWIFF 2024

SWIFF hosted its inaugural festival in November 2022, showcasing over 3,000 films. Building on that success, SWIFF 2023 (June 2023) showcased over 13,000 films. SWIFF plans to host its third season in 2024 with 15,000 films.

Partner with the United States White House

Guided by its founding principle of ‘dreaming big,’ SWIFF’s inception defied expectations. From a newly-formed student-led festival, it evolved into a global force, impacting over 12,100 young artists. In 2024 and 2025, SWIFF aims to ‘dream big’ by partnering with the United States White House. SWIFF hopes to help reinstate the White House Student Film Festival (hosted in 2014, 2015, and 2016) to spotlight the vibrant voices of America’s youth.
