Showing 1-19 of 20 Over two hundred years ago Bookholm, the City of Dreaming Books, was destroyed by a catastrophic firestorm. Optimus Yarnspinner, who witnessed this disaster, has since become Zamonia's greatest writer and is resting on his laurels at Lindworm Castle. Spoilt by his monumental success and basking in adulation, he one day receives a disturbing message that finally reinvests his life with meaning: a cryptic missive that lures him back to Bookholm. Rebuilt on a magnificent scale, the city is once more a vibrant literary metropolis and Mecca of the book trade teeming with book fanatics of all kinds. On the track of the mysterious letter that brought him there, Yarnspinner has scarcely set foot in the city before he falls prey to its spirit of adventure. He is reunited with old friends like Inazia Anazazi the Uggly and Ahmed ben Kibitzer the Nocturnomath, but he also encounters the city's new marvels, which include the mysterious Biblionauts, the warring Puppetists, and the city's latest craze, the Invisible Theatre. Yarnspinner strays ever deeper into the Labyrinth of Dreaming Books, which seems to wield a strange power over Bookholm's destinies. He is eventually drawn into an irresistible maelstrom of events far more sensational than any of the adventures he has previously embarked upon. The City of Dreaming Books AuthorWalter MoersOriginal titleDie Stadt der Träumenden BücherTranslatorJohn BrownjohnIllustratorWalter MoersCover artistWalter MoersCountryGermanyLanguageGermanGenreFantasy novelPublisherGerman: Piper Verlag GmbH. English: Overlook TPPublication date2004Published in English2007Media typePrint (hardcover)ISBN978-1-58567-899-0OCLC149009059 The City of Dreaming Books (original title: Die Stadt der Träumenden Bücher) is the fourth novel in the Zamonia series written and illustrated by German author Walter Moers, but the third to be translated into English by John Brownjohn. The German version was released in Autumn 2004, and the English version followed in Autumn 2007.[1] It is followed by two sequels, The Labyrinth of Dreaming Books (2011) and The Castle of Dreaming Books (TBA). Plot Protagonist Optimus Yarnspinner (Hildegunst von Mythenmetz in the German text) is a Lindworm (a species of bibliophile dinosaurs) who inherits a perfectly written manuscript from his mentor. Its author went to Bookholm, the center of the Zamonian book trade, and was not heard of again. Seeking adventure as well as inspiration for his own writing, Optimus travels to Bookholm in search of the mysterious author.
A publisher directs him to Pfistomefel Smyke, who controls the book trade by means of musical hypnosis. Smyke pretends to help, but then reveals that he hates art and that a truly gifted author would raise the bar and hurt the market for mass-produced fiction. Smyke drugs Optimus and transfers him to the catacombs of Bookholm. The catacombs are a labyrinth of old, disused shops and storerooms beneath the city. They are inhabited by all kinds of monsters as well as bookhunters, brutish mercenaries who only care for the high prices that rare old books can fetch on the surface. As Optimus tries to navigate the labyrinth, he falls victim to a bookhunter’s trap and almost gets eaten by a spider-like sphinx. A bookhunter saves him, only to try and to sell Optimus’ body parts as trophies to fans of lindworm literature. The hunter is killed by an unseen force. By means of hypnosis, Optimus is guided to the cave of the booklings, a race of one-eyed creatures who live by reading and memorizing books. There he finds some respite, but when the cave is attacked by bookhunters, Optimus has to flee again. Optimus comes to Shadowhall Castle, home of the Shadow King, a giant who is the mortal enemy of bookhunters. The Shadow King takes a liking to Optimus and tutors him in the art of writing. Eventually he reveals himself to be the mysterious author of the manuscript. Many years ago, he showed his manuscript to Smyke and was transformed into a golem made of an alchemistic paper that is nearly indestructible but will catch fire if exposed to natural light. He was banished to the catacombs and Smyke put a price on his head, leading to the Shadow King’s feud with the bookhunters. The Shadow King takes Optimus close to the surface where they are ambushed by the bookhunters. The booklings save them by hypnotizing the bookhunters so that they kill themselves.

Some are onomatopoeic; others are amalgamations of existing words or Indo-European roots; still others are created by the author. Many such words can be found in Chapter 60. A sample of these are listed below: "fructodism:" the sensation experienced when squeezing an orange until it becomes soft. "rumbumblion:" the sound produced by a volcanic eruption. "indigabluntic:" one of a number of derogatory epithets.
"nasodiscrepant:" a person whose nostrils are notably different in size. "glunk:" a sound some animals — including lindworms — can make with their teeth, indicating pleasure or satisfaction, particularly with a certain food Sequels The Labyrinth of Dreaming Books A sequel, The Labyrinth of Dreaming Books, has been released, wherein Yarnspinner, now a best-selling author, receives a letter apparently from himself, and visits a rebuilt Bookholm in search of its origin. There, he becomes engrossed in 'Puppetism', the variety of puppet-theatres now ubiquitous in the city, and intrigued by the emulation, among Bookhunters, of Colophonius Regenschein. This second book ends in a cliffhanger, featuring Yarnspinner alone in the still-enormous catacombs, with implication that the 'Shadow King' is alive. Wordplay The list of fictional authors, anagramming the names of historical authors, continues or repeats in the sequel, expanded therein to include musicians and artists. These include (but are not limited to): Orphetu Harnschauer = Arthur Schopenhauer Nartinian Schneidhasser = Hans Christian Andersen Plaidy Kurding = Rudyard Kipling Trebor Sulio Vessenton = Robert Louis Stevenson Rubert Jashem = James Thurber Joghan Rimsh = John Grisham Volkodir Vanabim = Vladimir Nabokov Wilma Kleballi = William Blake Eiderich Fischnertz = Friedrich Nietzsche Odion la Vivanti = Antonio Vivaldi Perla la Gadeon = Edgar Allan Poe Evubeth van Goldwine = Ludwig van Beethoven Freechy Jarfer = Jeffrey Archer Arlis Worcell = Lewis Carroll Edd van Murch = Edvard Munch Crederif Pincho = Frédéric Chopin Many are identified with their models by reference to the subject of their works. The Castle of Dreaming Books A second sequel, The Castle of Dreaming Books, is being written, but as of August 2015, its release date has been indefinitely postponed. It is believed to continue directly from the end of the previous book.[citation needed] References ^ new books in german ^ Overlook Press Retrieved from "
