Workshops instead of classrooms are mainly caused by tradition, because there are many types of activities that are very similar to championship courses. The length of the seminars is usually small, there are small and most specific seminars. Due to the short duration of most of these actions, these seminars are usually very specific or are attended by a small number. Dramaturgical workshops, theater championship courses and even championship projects - all of this belong to the wide category of theater championships. Many of them are more specific and focused, for example on the style of control or unique problems with writing games. In many cases, acting championships are led by talented experts or famous people. This type of experience offered at school is an excellent way for educational institutions to acquaint students with prominent theater personalities without required a complete teacher. Every teacher can have their own seminar style, but some follow very strict rules. There are also traditional styles of teaching that can be common in some theater movements. The event held in theater workshops depends on the subject considered. In practical seminars, students can work with physical scenes or tasks. Writing workshops often include examples of work and criticism of the work of writers. Design workshops are often limited by the scope of many theater projects and, as a result, often focus on creating small models or other reasonable designs. Some seminars include caTheater stars are therefore very competitive. Small workshops may be equally expensive, but their success depends on mutual
