Charlemagne destiny 2 commands

Charlemagne is a bot for Destiny info that's not made by Bungie or Discord. Two people, waterpolotrev67 and Tor Kallon, created it to help with player stats and clan rankings. They got all the tools and leaderboards needed to manage this stuff. When you use Charlemagne, she tells you how good you are at playing Destiny. If you need help, join their Discord Support Server - the community and the people who made Charlemagne will help you out. You don't have to register with Charlemagne, but if you do, it makes things easier because it links your Bungie info to your Discord ID. This way, you can see your stats without typing in your Bungie name every time. To link your Bungie profile, use the /register command. If you're part of a Destiny 2 clan, you have to be registered with Charlemagne so you can do things with your clan. Charlemagne uses special commands that start with / (like /help). If you want to see all the commands, use /help or go to Warmind.io. When you type in a command starting with /, it will show you some options - like Frequently Used Commands, Charlemagne Commands, and Discord Default Commands. You can either type in the command yourself or pick one from the pop-up menu that shows up. For example, if you want to see your last PVE (Player versus Environment) activity, type /last pve. If you select an option, a new menu will show up where you can choose more options - like Activity: Strike and Success: True. If you're looking at your own stats and are registered with Charlemagne, you don't have to use the Guardian option because she knows who you are. When you send the message, Charlemagne will give you your results. There are a few ways to see stats for a specific guardian - like pinging them in Discord (if they're registered and in the same server), using their Discord ID if they're not registered or can't be pinged, or finding their Discord ID by toggling Developer Mode on. To use Charlemagne's Slash commands on Discord, follow these steps: Once you have a guardian's ID number, open Discord and type 'lguardian ` in the command line. You can also enter their Bungie Name (e.g., Hanxa#9364) to find it on bungie.net. Make sure to add the hashtag (#), numbers, and no spaces when typing the guardian's name and ID. If someone ran a command, click on the link at the top of the command response that reads "guardian name used /command" to see exactly what command and options were used. Charlemagne, a Discord bot for Destiny 2 servers, offers various commands for server admins to manage roles, channels, notifications, and more. Some key features include: - Automatic role assignment - Channel management (turning Charlemagne's responses on/off) - LFG capabilities control (off/on per channel) Server admins can run these commands by using a prefix (!) followed by the command name. For example: !pve. Users can also access various features and settings, such as: - Registering for personalized services - View global rankings and articles - Accessing user settings and preferences (Premium Feature) - Viewing most used weapons and weekly rotations Additionally, Charlemagne provides information on Xur's current wares and arrival, as well as Destiny Commands from Xgerhard. Note: Some commands have changed to slash commands. Users can find more information about these changes by clicking on the "Charlemagne's Commands" link above. The bot also offers features such as: - Automatic role assignment - Channel management (turning Charlemagne's responses on/off) - LFG capabilities control (off/on per channel) Server admins can run these commands by using a prefix (!) followed by the command name. The channel settings allow for various management options, such as disabling LFG/event creation and muting general discussions. This does not affect existing LFG or commands, but limits access to certain features like Charlemagne command stats. Additionally, it offers clan-related functions, including syncing clans with Discord servers and displaying notifications when clan members complete a dungeon. The server admin can send a DM to unregistered Discord members asking them to register with Charlemagne, which is required for membership. The GAME feature tracks activity and rewards Warmind reputation based on discussion, team play, and completion of activities like raids. It also displays rankings and leaderboards, assigns roles to members, and sets server seasons. This feature requires the G.A.M.E. command to be enabled and must be used in conjunction with specific channel settings. It is designed to encourage clan activity and recognition within the server community. LFG commands may take some time to post. Admins can pause an LFG or Event Channel to post messages, but the channel must be clear of all posts. The server LFG channel sets the current channel as a bulletin board for LFG and events, only allowing LFG commands and events to be posted, while other chatter is automatically deleted. Server LFG discussions create a temporary channel for event participants to discuss upcoming LFG or events. Server LFG filter configures channels to filter by activity, Destiny version, platform, timezone, or public status. Server LFG lifetime sets how long posts remain in the channel after an event starts, with a maximum of 24 hours and a default of 30 minutes. Server LFG nowonly sets new event start times to the current time. Server notifications automatically post feeds to designated channels, including Twitter feeds from Bungie, Charlemagne, and Destiny the Game, as well as notifications for daily resets, Eververse stock, and more. Other available notifications include flawless alerts, goodbye messages, gunsmith mods, planet destiny tweets, destiny roundup summaries, seal alerts, spider inventory, trials map call-outs, and vendor engrams. The weekly command posts weekly reset information, including EP weapons, Dreaming City Curse level, and Ascendant Challenge Location, but requires community input to function effectively.
