Founded in 1923, Agusta was a pioneering Italian helicopter manufacturer that played a significant role in shaping the industry. Count Giovanni Agusta, a visionary entrepreneur, established the company with his passion for aviation. Initially, the firm focused on producing aircraft, but it soon branched out into helicopter manufacturing. In the 1950s, Agusta began licensing Bell helicopters, later transitioning to produce Sikorsky, Boeing, and McDonnell Douglas products. Agusta's ambition to design and build its own helicopters led to the creation of iconic models like the A.101 and A.106. The company also produced a range of aero engines, including the GA.70 and GA.140. However, it was the Agusta A109 that became a commercial and military success story. Developed in the 1970s, this twin-turbine helicopter remains in production to this day. Agusta's collaborations with international partners led to groundbreaking projects like the EH101 and NH90 helicopters. The company also developed innovative designs such as the A109 Power and the single-engine A119 Koala. Unfortunately, Agusta's reputation was marred by controversies, including involvement in the Belgian bribery scandal and allegations of corruption in its deal with India. In July 2000, Agusta merged with Westland Helicopters to form AgustaWestland S.p.A., a multinational helicopter design and manufacturing company. The merger marked a significant shift in the industry, creating a leading player in the global market. Today, Agusta's legacy continues through its successor companies, including Leonardo S.p.A. The Indian government has launched an investigation into the alleged corruption involving British company AgustaWestland in the country. The probe is centered around the Rs 7,000 crore (US$1.6 billion) deal between 2005 and 2013, which saw AgustaWestland supplying helicopters to the Indian military. According to the complaint filed by Indian authorities, AgustaWestland has been selling civil helicopters in India through its subsidiary, while also receiving foreign exchange deprivation due to offshore payments for the sale of helicopters. The company's twin brothers, Nayan Jagjivan and Nakul Jagjivan, are promoters of both companies involved in the alleged corruption. The investigation into the Indian helicopter bribery scandal began after a complaint was filed against AgustaWestland. The government has since launched an audit to examine the purchase of a VVIP helicopter by the Chhattisgarh government, which is believed to have overpaid Rs. 65 lakh (US$120,000) for the aircraft. The probe into AgustaWestland's activities in India is ongoing, with authorities seeking to determine if the company engaged in any irregularities or corruption during the deal. The company has previously denied any wrongdoing and has stated that it operated within the bounds of Indian law.MV Agusta 2022 Price List ===== MV Agusta AMO RC $4,600 MV Agusta AMO RR $3,450 MV Agusta Rapido Serie Oro $786 MV Agusta BRUTALE 1000 RR $33,800 MV Agusta BRUTALE ROSSO $15,000 MV Agusta Dragster RC SCS $22,900 MV Agusta Brutale RR SCS $19,000 MV Agusta Rush 1000 $34,000 MV Agusta F3 800 RC $19,990 MV Agusta F3 800 $18,500
