The designs, which reportedly originated from a "packaging guide" document created by Mojang, have been pulled from social media platforms due to copyright claims. One commenter joked that the film will be "the worst movie of all time," while another dryly stated, "This will be a movie." Despite production difficulties and rough leaked images, the project's prospects remain uncertain. Notable video game adaptations like Pokmon Detective Pikachu and Sonic the Hedgehog have shown that even flawed titles can succeed, but other games like Five Nights at Freddy's and Uncharted have struggled to translate well to the big screen. The film, which will feature Jack Black as Steve capturing an evil entity known as Malgosha, has been kept under wraps until now, with Jason Momoa also rumored to be involved.Minecraft Movie Leaks Images of Jack Black as Steve, Revealing Bearded and Blue-Shirted Actor Eurogamer has obtained leaked images from a Minecraft developer document that show Jack Black as the iconic playable character Steve in the upcoming film. The photos depict Black bearded, wearing his trademark blue shirt and jeans, and holding a blocky pickaxe, along with other characters like the Creeper and cuboid bee. Although the images were removed due to copyright claims, they appear to be legitimate.The leaked images also include plot summaries for the Minecraft movie, which follows Steve's capture by villain Malgosha and a rescue mission by "four fresh visitors." The leak comes amid controversy surrounding Jack Black's role in Tenacious D's cancelled world tour following his bandmate Kyle Gass' comments on former U.S. President Donald Trump's assassination attempt.Jack Black previously teased his role as Steve with an Instagram video showcasing him singing the Double Rainbow song and giving a tour of the trailer belonging to Steve from the movie. Other actors rumored to be part of the cast include Emma Myers, Danielle Brooks, and Jason Momoa.
