Pemberley Natural History Books, established by Ian Johnson in 1989, is a leading supplier of new, used, and antiquarian books on entomology and related subjects. They cater to individuals, libraries, museums, and research institutes worldwide. Although primarily focused on entomology, they also stock books on zoology, botany, geology, and other natural history subjects. Their collection includes titles from major publishers as well as independent and specialist suppliers globally. Many items are held in stock, and the company can source rare or out-of-print books to meet customer demand. They maintain a large stock of used and antiquarian books, reprints, and periodical runs, often selling scarce volumes before listing them online. The company prides itself on its professional service and packing quality, ensuring that customers receive excellent condition books. Their website offers new features, including online shopping, special offers, and thousands of high-quality used books. Customers can join their mailing list to stay informed about new titles and recent acquisitions. Pemberley Books also publishes two journals, Entomologist's, and maintains a printed catalogue sent annually to customers who have ordered from them in the last two years. The catalogue is available online as a PDF file, and customers can opt for e-mail newsletters or visit their specialist bookshop in Iwer, west of London, where knowledgeable staff are on hand to assist. Pemberley Natural History Books Publishes First Book and Seeks New Authors We at Entomologist's Monthly Magazine are pleased to announce the publication of our first book, Andrew Duff's Checklist of Beetles of the British Isles.
