Barbara Dunkelman, a Canadian actress, has had a long and varied career with Rooster Teeth. Born on July 2, 1989, in Montreal, Quebec, she grew up in Ottawa, Ontario, before moving to Texas to pursue her passions. After graduating from Concordia University in 2011, she began working for Rooster Teeth as their first community manager, a role that showcased her skills and dedication to the company. Dunkelman's experience with Rooster Teeth dates back to 2004, when she signed up on their website. She has since become an integral part of the community, hosting events such as the Toronto Red vs. Blue fan event and even co-founding the Internet Box podcast in 2011. Her involvement with the company has also led to her appearances in several Rooster Teeth shorts and podcasts, including the popular RWBY series. In addition to her work with Rooster Teeth, Dunkelman has had a successful acting career, landing her first major role in the show RWBY in 2012. She has also provided voices for other projects, such as Camp Camp, and was even a partial owner of the FCF Wild Aces Indoor Football Team. Today, Dunkelman resides in Austin, Texas, and continues to be involved with Rooster Teeth, although she is now no longer employed by the company. Amy Dunkelman is a prominent figure in the world of gaming and entertainment. She began her career as a marketing manager at Rooster Teeth, where she also appeared on the award-winning podcast and attended various events. In addition to her work behind the scenes, Dunkelman has also lent her voice to several animated series, including RWBY and Fairy Tail. Her breakout role in RWBY's Yang Xiao Long character was facilitated by Monty Oum, who introduced her to the part despite her lack of prior voice acting experience. In 2016, Dunkelman launched a lifestyle podcast called Always Open with Rooster Teeth, which took an indefinite hiatus before returning in 2023. She also founded her own clothing line and became a Creative Director at Rooster Teeth in 2019. Dunkelman has appeared in several live-action films and TV shows, including Rooster Teeth Shorts and Blood Fest. In her personal life, Dunkelman is in a relationship with producer Trevor Collins and revealed on her YouTube channel in 2021 that she suffers from hyperhidrosis. She has also spoken publicly about her identity as queer, stating that she identifies as not fully straight but fairly straight. The company has grown significantly over the years, becoming known for its online shows, podcasts, and web series. Barbara Dunkelman, one of the original founders, has been instrumental in shaping the company's content and community. She has hosted several shows, including "What did I do today?" and "Always Open," which has become a fan favorite podcast. Rooster Teeth has also produced several successful web series, including "RWBY," an animated show based on the popular video game franchise. The show has gained a large following worldwide and has won several awards. The company has also expanded into other areas, such as live events and conventions, with Rooster Teeth Expo (RTX) being one of its flagship events. RTX has become a major destination for fans of gaming and pop culture. Throughout its history, Rooster Teeth has received recognition and accolades for its innovative content and community-building efforts. The company continues to grow and evolve, with new shows and projects in development. Note that the original text is quite long and contains many specific details about Rooster Teeth's history and achievements. This paraphrased version aims to capture the overall essence of the company's story and growth over time. Barbara Dunkelman is an important figure in the RoosterTeeth brand. She's been involved with various projects and events over the years. One of these projects is her clothing line, which she introduced to the world through a tweet back in 2016. Barbara has also appeared in several YouTube videos, including horror movies like "Siri: The Horror Movie" and simulation racers like "Immersion: Simulation Racer". She's even starred in her own episode of Red vs. Blue! Barbara is also known for being open about her personal life. In a 2021 tweet, she mentioned that she has hyperhidrosis, a condition that causes excessive sweating. This shows that she's comfortable with being vulnerable and sharing her experiences with others. As an advocate for inclusivity, Barbara has spoken out about her own sexuality, saying that while she identifies as not fully straight, she's mostly fairly straight. This kind of openness is important because it helps to create a more accepting environment for everyone. In 2022, a movie called "Justice League x RWBY" was announced, and Barbara was part of the voice cast. She's also been involved in other projects like "Head Canon", which explores the world of RoosterTeeth. Overall, Barbara Dunkelman is an important figure in the RoosterTeeth community, and her openness and advocacy are truly inspiring.
