Looking forward to sharing the magic of Chris Van Allsburg's "The Polar Express" with children this holiday season! A special way to enhance the experience is by creating or using free printable Polar Express Train Tickets. These tickets come in two designs, one simple and blue with just the word "believe," and another fancier with a round trip to the North Pole. You can customize them for your party or activity, such as making it a pajama day at school or hosting a family movie night. The possibilities are endless! You can use these tickets as invitations, bell tags, or even train conductor hats. To make it even more special, why not pair it with a hot chocolate bar and some festive crafts?Polar Express activities and crafts are a great way to extend the magic after reading or watching the movie! One of our favorite printables is the Polar Express Color by Number pages, featuring a ticket, bell, hot chocolate, train, and Santa. For more fun, check out Whole Child Homeschool's printable pack with learning activities like a scientific investigation and beginning sound sort. You can also download free Polar Express tickets for personal use only! I recently created my own Polar Express printables after struggling to find the perfect ones online, and now we're all set for our Christmas party! The kids will love wearing their pajamas and receiving their North Pole round trip train ticket upon arrival. We'll have a blast playing festive games like pinning the nose on the snowman and having a sock snowball fight. To top it off, each child will receive a gift, including a bell with a special quote from the movie. If you're planning your own Polar Express party, feel free to download these free resources and get creative!Express children's book is a holiday classic that we read multiple times before bedtime every year. Give each child their very own Train Ticket as they board the train for a magical journey! You can customize these tickets, print them out at home, or use them as party invitations - the choice is yours. Don't miss these fun and festive ideas to bring the holiday magic to life. With a little creativity, you can turn your printable into a special keepsake that will be cherished for years to come.Instead of grilling, I whipped up a skillet dinner of burgers, onions, potatoes, and carrots wrapped in foil for everyone. The meal turned out adorable, and we all enjoyed it. Later, we treated ourselves to warm cookies and rich hot chocolate. Since our kids are still young, we kept the messy drink to the kitchen rather than letting them have it downstairs while watching a movie.One fun way to surprise your family with new Christmas PJs is by incorporating them into your Polar Express party. After our tasty dinner, each of us received a thoughtful gift from LazyOne cozy matching holiday pajamas that are both stylish and comfortable. Even our furry friend got in on the fun! If you're searching for comfy Christmas Eve PJs or festive sleepwear for a holiday train ride (like the Polar Express), consider these adorable options.As part of their present, each family member received not only new PJs but also a 'train ticket' to the North Pole. For our movie night, everyone had their own personalized Polar Express ticket it added an extra layer of excitement to our activities! You can find free printable Polar Express tickets at the end of this post, perfect for personal use or as invitations for friends.I printed my tickets on golden sparkly paper for a luxurious touch but encountered some ink smudging issues due to double-sided printing. To avoid this, I opted for single-sided printing and glued the front and back together before laminating them for durability. If you're looking for more ways to enhance your Polar Express movie night, keep reading below for ideas.Create a festive gift by threading the trinkets onto a ribbon, perfect as a sweet holiday present for each child after watching the movie. It's not only an adorable keepsake but also a charming ornament to adorn your Christmas tree. Add a touch of winter wonderland magic with large paper bag snowflakes at your Christmas party. I delight in crafting them and displaying them throughout the year. Whichever activity you choose for your Polar Express movie night, may your holiday season be merry and joyful, filled with quality time spent together as a family.
