The highly anticipated Question and Answer segment of Miss Universe 2024 marked a pivotal moment in the competition, pushing the Top 5 finalists to their most challenging test yet. The first round of questions prompted the participants — Denmark’s Victoria Kjær Theilvig, Nigeria’s Chidimma Adetshina, Mexico’s Maria Fernanda Beltran, Thailand’s Opal Suchata Chuangsri, and Venezuela’s Ileana Marquez Pedroza — to reflect on topics like cyberbullying, empowerment, and leadership qualities. The second phase of the segment invited the delegates to address the question, “Miss Universe has inspired generations of women. What do you want to say to those watching you now?” Victoria’s response to this final query secured her the crown, marking a historic milestone for Denmark. Here’s a summary of their responses: A post shared by Miss Universe (@missuniverse) QUESTION: How would you live your life differently if you knew nobody would judge you? ANSWER: I wouldn’t alter a single aspect of my lifestyle. We grow from our mistakes, learn daily, and carry those lessons forward. That’s why I embrace each day with positivity, and I’ll never change a thing. Article continues after this advertisement FINAL QUESTION: Miss Universe has inspired generations of women. ANSWER: My mother’s fight against cancer is the driving force behind my strength. I’m here to honor her resilience, perseverance, and discipline. I encourage you to build your dreams and embrace the power of being a strong woman, as Diana de Gales once said. I aim to be the queen of the people’s hearts. FINAL QUESTION: Miss Universe has inspired generations of women. What do you want to say to the ones watching you now? ANSWER: As my social project emphasizes, reject cyberbullying and harassment. We face a critical issue caused by social media, and my message is to fight, control, and adapt to this new reality with emotional intelligence. We must master our emotions to deliver this message fearlessly. 3rd Ileana Marquez Pedroza, the 4th runner-up from Venezuela, described her ideal woman of today as someone who embodies respect, love, and union. She shared that it's not just about being a Miss Universe representative but about every single woman earning respect, love, and visibility to be here tonight. The top five contestants competing for the Miss Universe Philippines 2024 title expressed their views during the coronation night on Wednesday, May 22, at the Mall of Asia Arena in Pasay City. In the pageant’s Q&A segment, each of the top five candidates selected a question from an acrylic box and were allotted 30 seconds to respond. One contestant shared that her grandmother taught her the importance of being kind and that she looks up to her as an embodiment of what a great woman is. Another described her breakthrough achievement as participating in the Miss Universe Philippines pageant, which led to her transformation and improvement as a person. A third contestant mentioned that she faces challenges as a woman of color but uses her beauty and confidence to empower others. She hopes to inspire every Filipina by being a limitless example. Opal Suchata Chuangsri, the 3rd runner-up from Thailand, emphasized the importance of empathy in leadership. She believes that empathy is essential for caring about people's well-being and uniting them. She also shared her message to inspire generations of women: always believe and have hope, as their power and spirits will shine as long as they believe in themselves. Finally, Ileana Marquez Pedroza from Venezuela concluded the Q&A segment by saying that the Miss Universe crown tonight goes not only to the representative but to every single woman who has earned respect, love, and visibility. ========== I firmly believe that our intrinsic values are the driving force behind the impact we have on the world. As a transformational woman, I've had the privilege of being surrounded by like-minded individuals who share my vision. We collectively strive to embody the qualities that make us strong and resilient women. Question: What's the biggest hurdle you face as a Filipino woman, and how do you overcome it? I think one of the most significant challenges we, as Filipino women, face today is still being perceived as being "less than" by society. Unfortunately, men hold an unfair amount of power in our communities, but I believe that my presence here tonight serves as a beacon of hope for other women to rise above their circumstances. Through my platform and this moment, I want to empower you – just like I'm doing now – to stand up for yourself, be strong, and own your destiny. We can break free from the shackles of societal expectations and forge our own paths, just as I plan to do tonight. During the Miss Universe coronation, the top five finalists were given a chance to showcase their thoughts on various questions. When asked what they'd like to say to the audience watching them now, each contestant shared a unique message that resonated deeply with me. Miss Nigeria Chidimma Adetshina emphasized the importance of respecting oneself and others in order to create a more harmonious society. She believes that when we respect our own identities, we can inspire positive change in those around us. For Miss Mexico Maria Fernanda Beltran, it's her mother's courageous battle with cancer that gives her the strength to keep going. Her message is one of hope and resilience, encouraging everyone to pursue their dreams and never give up. Miss Denmark Victoria Kjaer Theilvig took a different approach, choosing not to change her ways even if she knew nobody would judge her. She believes that learning from our mistakes and staying positive are key to living a fulfilling life. Lastly, Miss Thailand Opal Suchata Chuangsr shared the qualities that make us strong – courage, determination, and the ability to adapt in the face of adversity. ========== Someone has to be a truly successful leader, and for me, one of the key qualities that a leader should possess is empathy. Empathy is crucial in caring about people and their well-being, regardless of their background or education. It's not just limited to leaders; everyone needs to have empathy towards each other to unite. Miss Universe has inspired generations of women, and I'd like to share a message with the ones watching her now - always believe and maintain hope. As I work on my project Opal for Her, which focuses on cancer patients and doctors, I've seen firsthand how hard it is to overcome this disease. However, what's inspiring is that everyone has hope and believes that tomorrow will be a better day. As long as you believe in your power and have hope, your spirits and power will shine. Miss Venezuela Ileana Marquez Pedroza describes her ideal woman of today, and it's someone who values respect, love, and union. She shares her experiences with 127 women from around the world, leaving differences aside to send a message of unity. The Miss Universe crown doesn't just go to the representative tonight but to every single woman who has earned respect and visibility, inspiring others to be here tonight. The Philippines' Chelsea Manalo may not have made it to the Top 12, but her country remains hopeful for its fifth Miss Universe crown, following in the footsteps of previous titleholders. Miss South Africa Demi-Leigh Nel-Peters was crowned Miss Universe 2017, ending a 39-year drought for her country. Her winning answer highlighted the importance of confidence and overcoming fears to help others.The journey to becoming Miss Universe Philippines 2024 has been a transformative one for Cainta, as she shares her experience with being a strong and inspirational woman. ==========___ Cainta recalls being told that she was too short to join a beauty pageant, but she has come to realize that pageants represent the nation and provide a platform for women to inspire others. She hopes to inspire every Filipina to believe in their own potential and limitations, just like she did. In contrast, Bulacan shares her struggles as a woman of color, who has faced challenges due to societal expectations on beauty. However, she believes that inner strength and self-empowerment are the keys to overcoming these obstacles. Taguig emphasizes the importance of women standing up for themselves and owning their own destiny, despite facing limitations imposed by society. Her platform aims to empower women to be strong, powerful, and confident in their abilities. The top five candidates also participated in a question-and-answer session, where they showcased their wit and charisma. Their responses highlighted their unique personalities and platforms, as they shared their thoughts on various topics. Overall, the Miss Universe Philippines 2024 pageant has been an opportunity for these women to inspire and empower others, while sharing their personal stories and experiences.Being respected is more important than being liked because it gives us confidence and power to be our true selves. My mom's fight against cancer has taught me the importance of respect and how it can motivate others. If I knew nobody would judge me, I wouldn't change who I am. A leader should have empathy to care about their people and understand their struggles. Empathy is key to being a successful leader and making a positive impact on society. My ideal woman is someone who values respect, love, and unity among all people. The Miss Universe pageant represents a message of hope and empowerment for women around the world. The winners' messages emphasize the importance of believing in oneself, overcoming adversity, and using emotional intelligence to make a difference.
