Google Workspace Business and Enterprise plans offer a range of features to help you achieve this. One such feature is the ability to request electronic signatures and manage vendor agreements, customer contracts, stakeholder sign-off, and more. This premium feature is available on some plans. Another key benefit is the integration with third-party apps like Slack, Zoom, Salesforce, Atlassian, SAP, and many more. You can import and create Google Drive files within these apps to streamline your work and keep your data in the trusted Google Cloud infrastructure. The security of your data is also top priority. Google Workspace offers robust security capabilities like Client-side encryption, Vault with Zero Trust approach, which safeguards your valuable data. Additionally, AI classification intelligently learns what you consider as sensitive content and automatically labels it in Google Drive. This feature provides a cloud-first, browser-based approach that is constantly updated without the need to install anything. It's available on some plans and offers robust security capabilities. Moreover, AI classification is enabled by default in Google Drive, making it easier for you to identify sensitive content. To get the most out of Drive right from your computer, automatically keep all your Drive files up to date. Available for Windows and MacOS, download Drive for desktop to experience this functionality. Companies like Blue Ox Films and Roche have seen significant benefits from using AI classification in Google Drive. With 100,000 users and billions of files, they couldn't handle the labeling process at scale without it. It provides value immediately, from the moment you turn it on. Drive also serves as a reference point for solutions from all past projects, ensuring that your teams don't feel like they need to reinvent the wheel when starting a new project. You can learn more about Drive's features and benefits by visiting our FAQs or plans and pricing page.
